SA Welcomes a Prince and Opens a Freeway

Convention Center Gets Facelift?

A roof raise might be better phraseology. San Antonio underwent this project with the expertise guidance of architect Thomas Noonan. Under the new plan, the seating capacity, originally 10,150, was increased to 16,243. This was achieved by building a higher tier which required an additional 33 feet in height. To raise the 5,800,000 pound roof 33 feet, a lifting system of synchronized hydraulic jacks was installed. This system required 16 jacks weighing 75 tons each.

During this raising process, the Spurs played their regular season games. So at intermittent periods, construction equipment had to be moved and the arena made safe and usable for the public.

Another aspect of this project included the installation of a new acoustical system and electronic scoring system. Also, a new and more intense lighting system, bright enough for television coverage of the games, was added.

Begun on May 3, 1977, this project was contracted for completion on September 14, 1978.

A Princely Visit. Mayor Lila Cockrell and members of the airport welcoming committee greet Prince Charles upon his arrival to San Antonio International Airport.

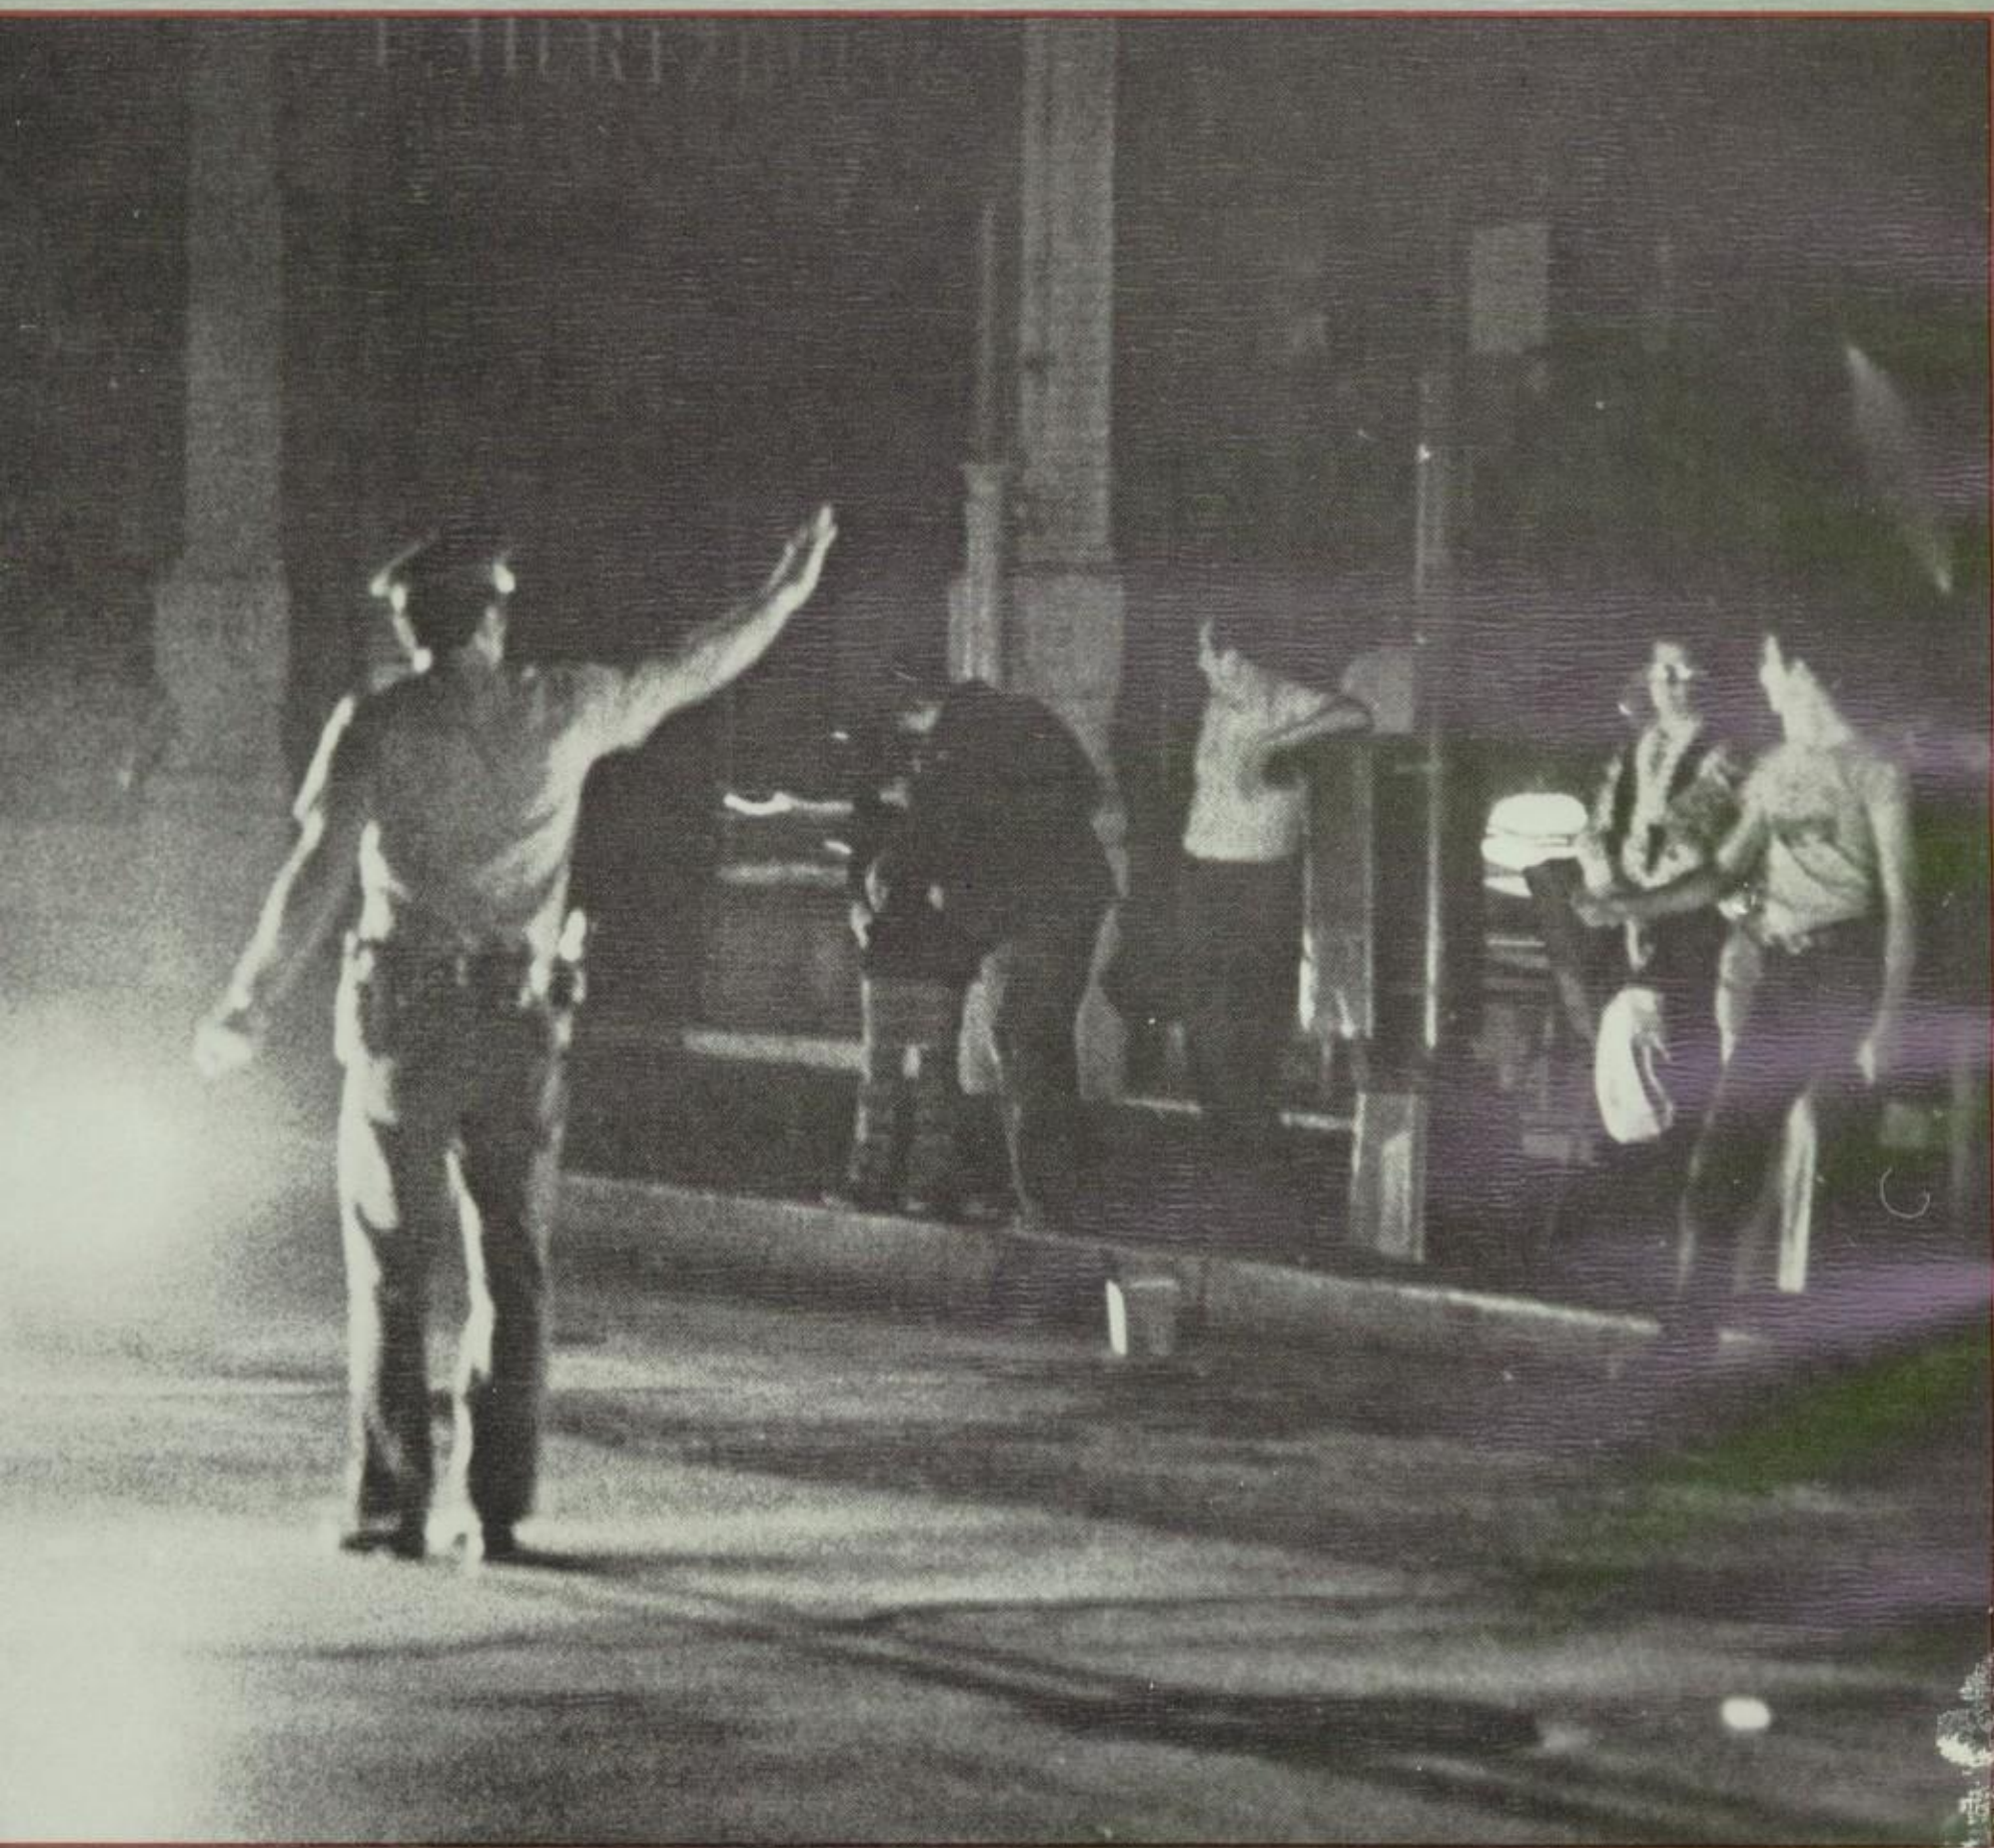

Blackout. On October 16, 1977, the city experienced a total power failure. Traffic lights and street lights, unable to function, caused chaos for policemen who were needed at every intersection to direct the flow of traffic.

Strikes! Unrest in Mines and Fields

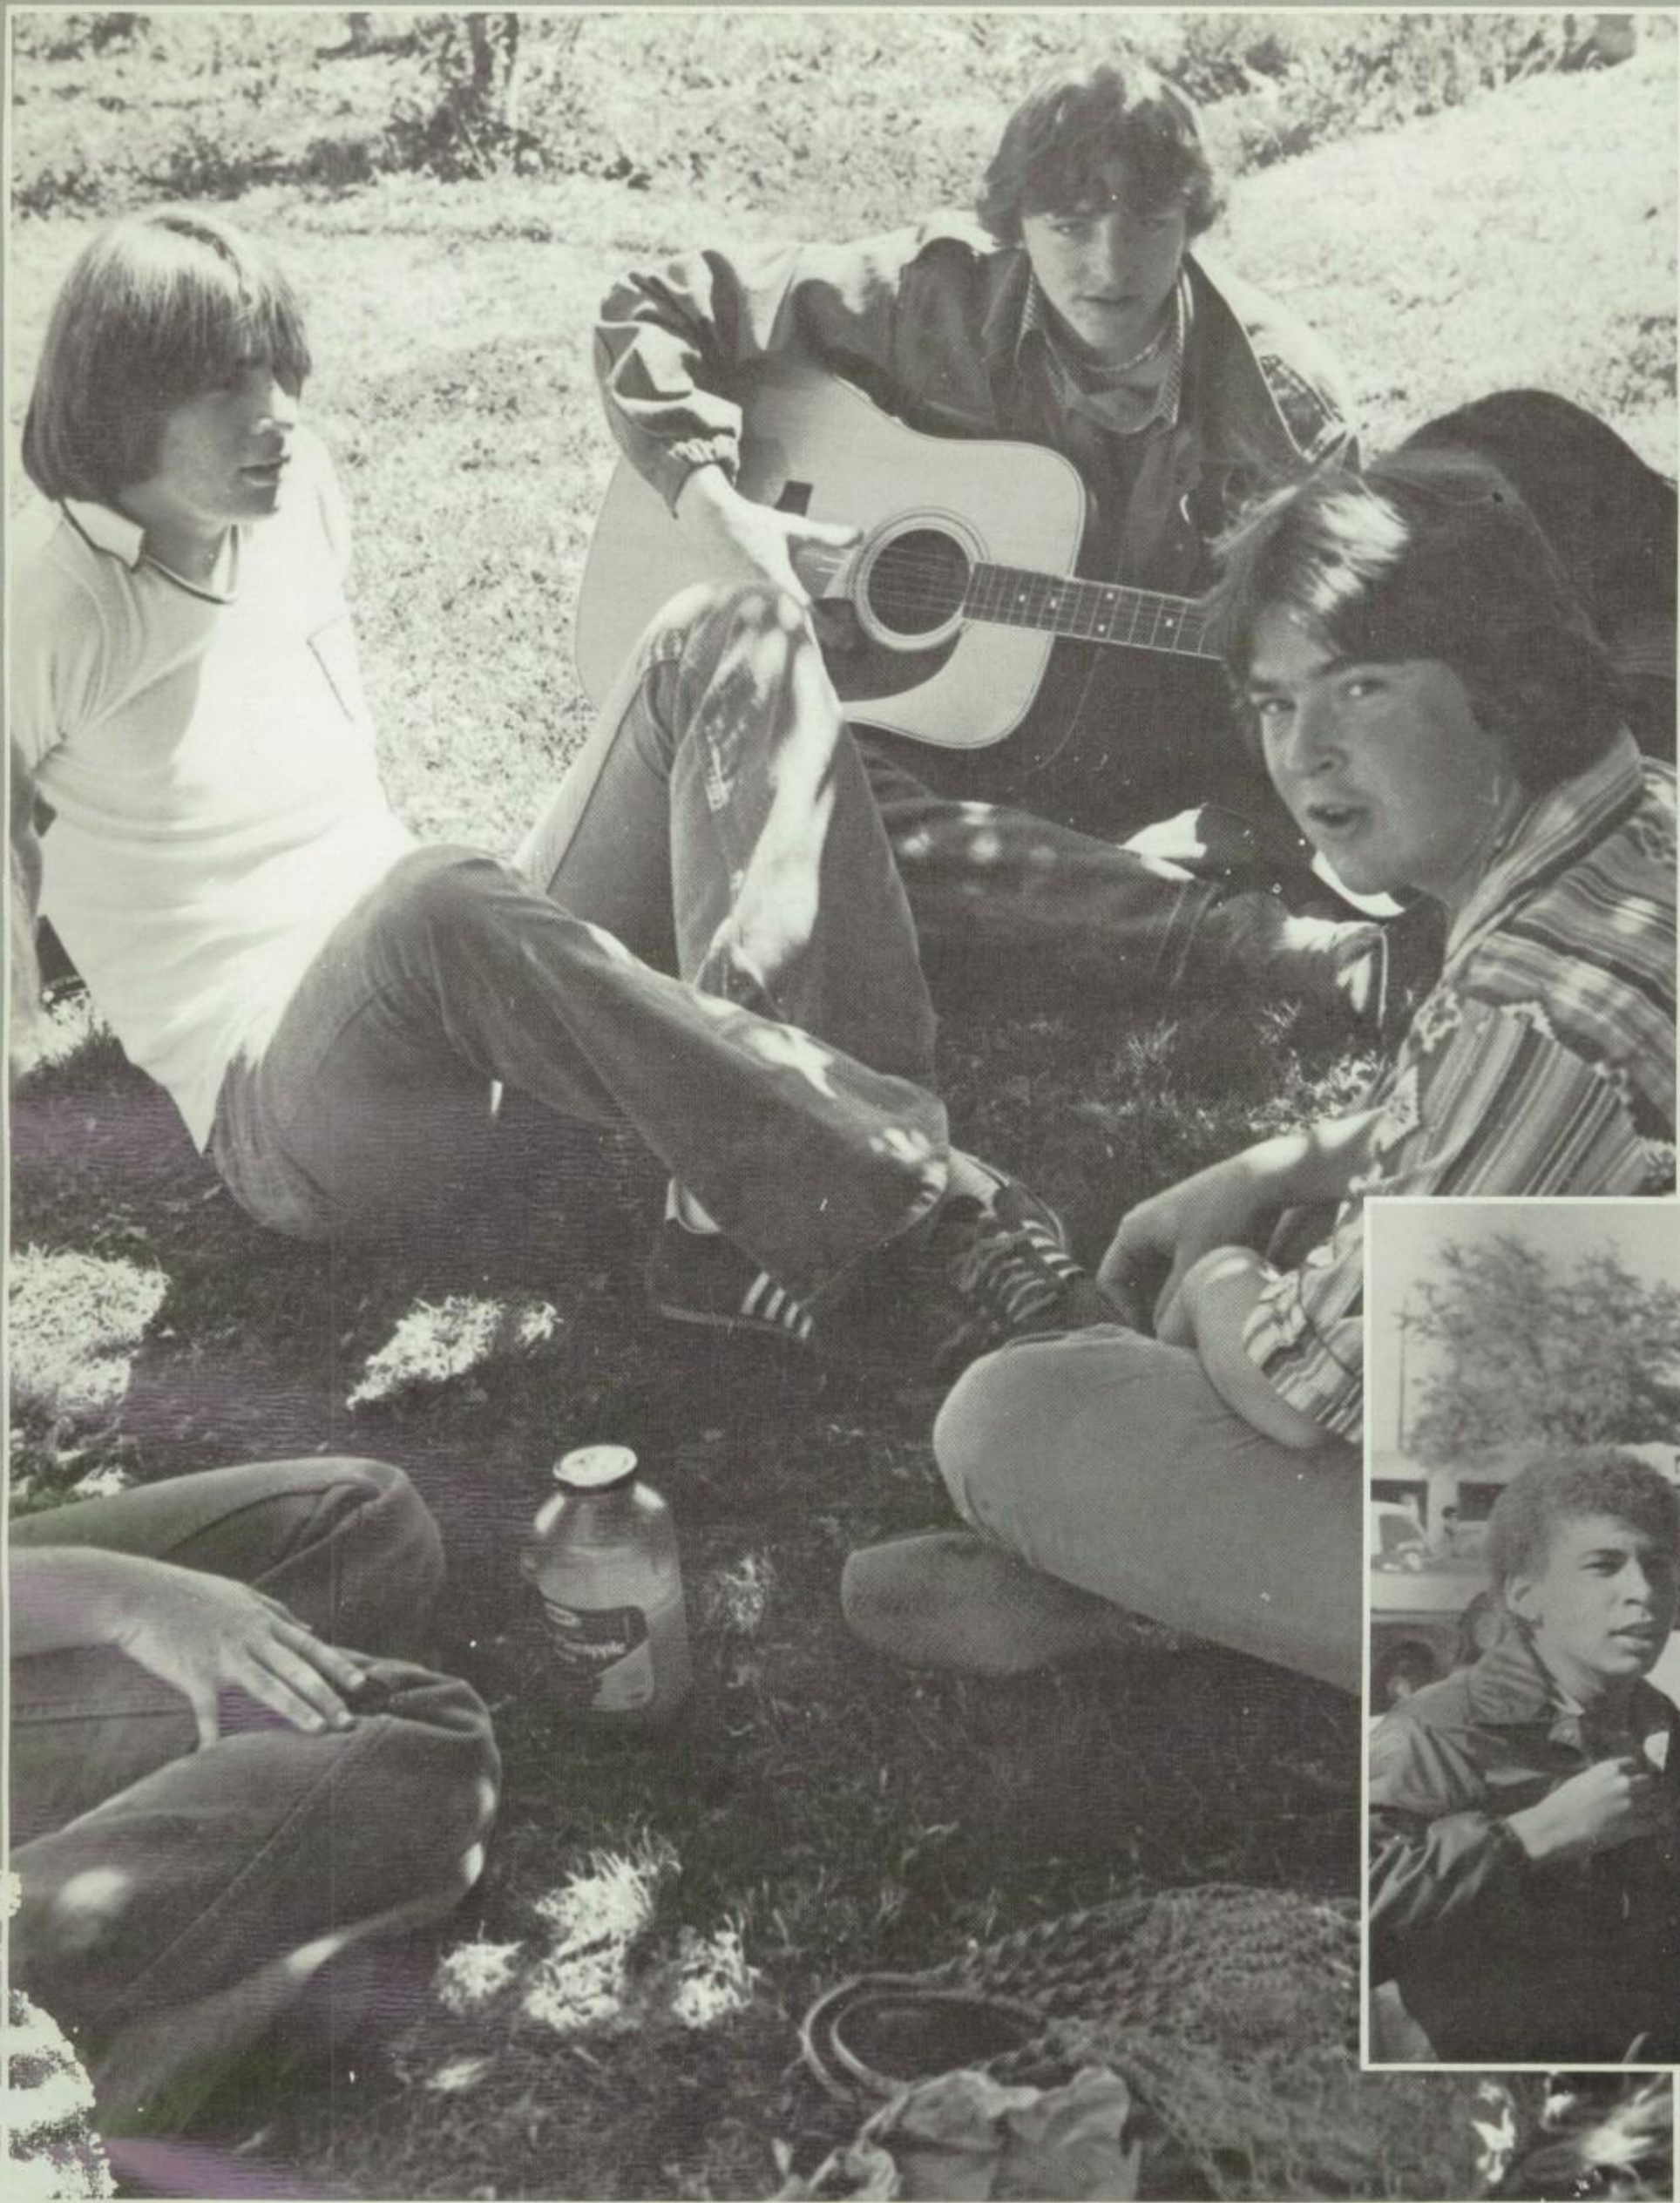

In December of 1977, most of the nation's soft coal miners switched off their headlamps, took off their hard hats, and vowed not to return into the mines until a new contract with the coal industry could be settled upon. 111 days later, March 27, 1978, union miners returned into the pits and shafts for the midnight and 8 a.m. shifts.

The impact, though generally mild in the southern United States, caused serious problems in the East and Midwest. Utility companies reduced output and ordered cut backs in consumption of power by industries and public places. Factories cut back operations and were forced to lay off employees.

A similar problem, the farm strike, also caused much controversy. Though both the coal and farm strikes had national impact, the farm strike had more of a direct impact on South Texas. Farmers rallied in Austin, San Antonio, and Laredo, as well as many smaller gatherings, to protest farm policies. In defiance of low financial returns for their goods, farmers refused to plant and others plowed under existing crops.

Farm Strike. A line of farm tractors heads towards Washington D.C. just outside of Annapolis, MD., to take part in a national protest against federal farm policies. The police said that there were more than 400 tractors, trucks, and cars in the procession that was headed west from the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Coal Strike. Insuring safety, Virginia State Troopers, wearing riot helmets and armed with sticks, walk before a convoy of non-union coal trucks. The troopers felt that there might have been trouble as the coal passed an area local picket line; however, the trucks proceeded without incident.

The majority of students were required to spend from 8:30 to 3:30 in the classroom, but outside of this seven-hour time span, students could be found participating in other activities. Students had the opportunity to try-out for roles in various productions sponsored by the drama department. Also, the Senior Play offered a chance for students to make their stage debut. Then for those brazen souls, there was the opportunity to display their abilities at the annual Talent Show.

The annual dances also gave students a break from routine studies. Homecoming festivities livened up a week at school and climaxed with the Homecoming Dance at Lackland Officer's Club. At the big 50's pep rally, choir members sang, and senior dance team members performed to "Rock Around the Clock". The student council, along with aviation club, had arranged for a plane to fly over the pep rally trailing the sign, "Go Rams".

Snowman's Ball, held in the cafeteria, brought the Christmas spirit into full swing.

Then came the turning point for seniors—Senior Prom. After the dance at Turtle Creek, it seemed all downhill.

Chris Bostdorf, John Burchfield, and Gloria Astudillo wait for their rides home after a long day.

With the arrival of spring, many students spend their lunch time in the courtyard to catch some sun.

Student Life

3,500 STRONG

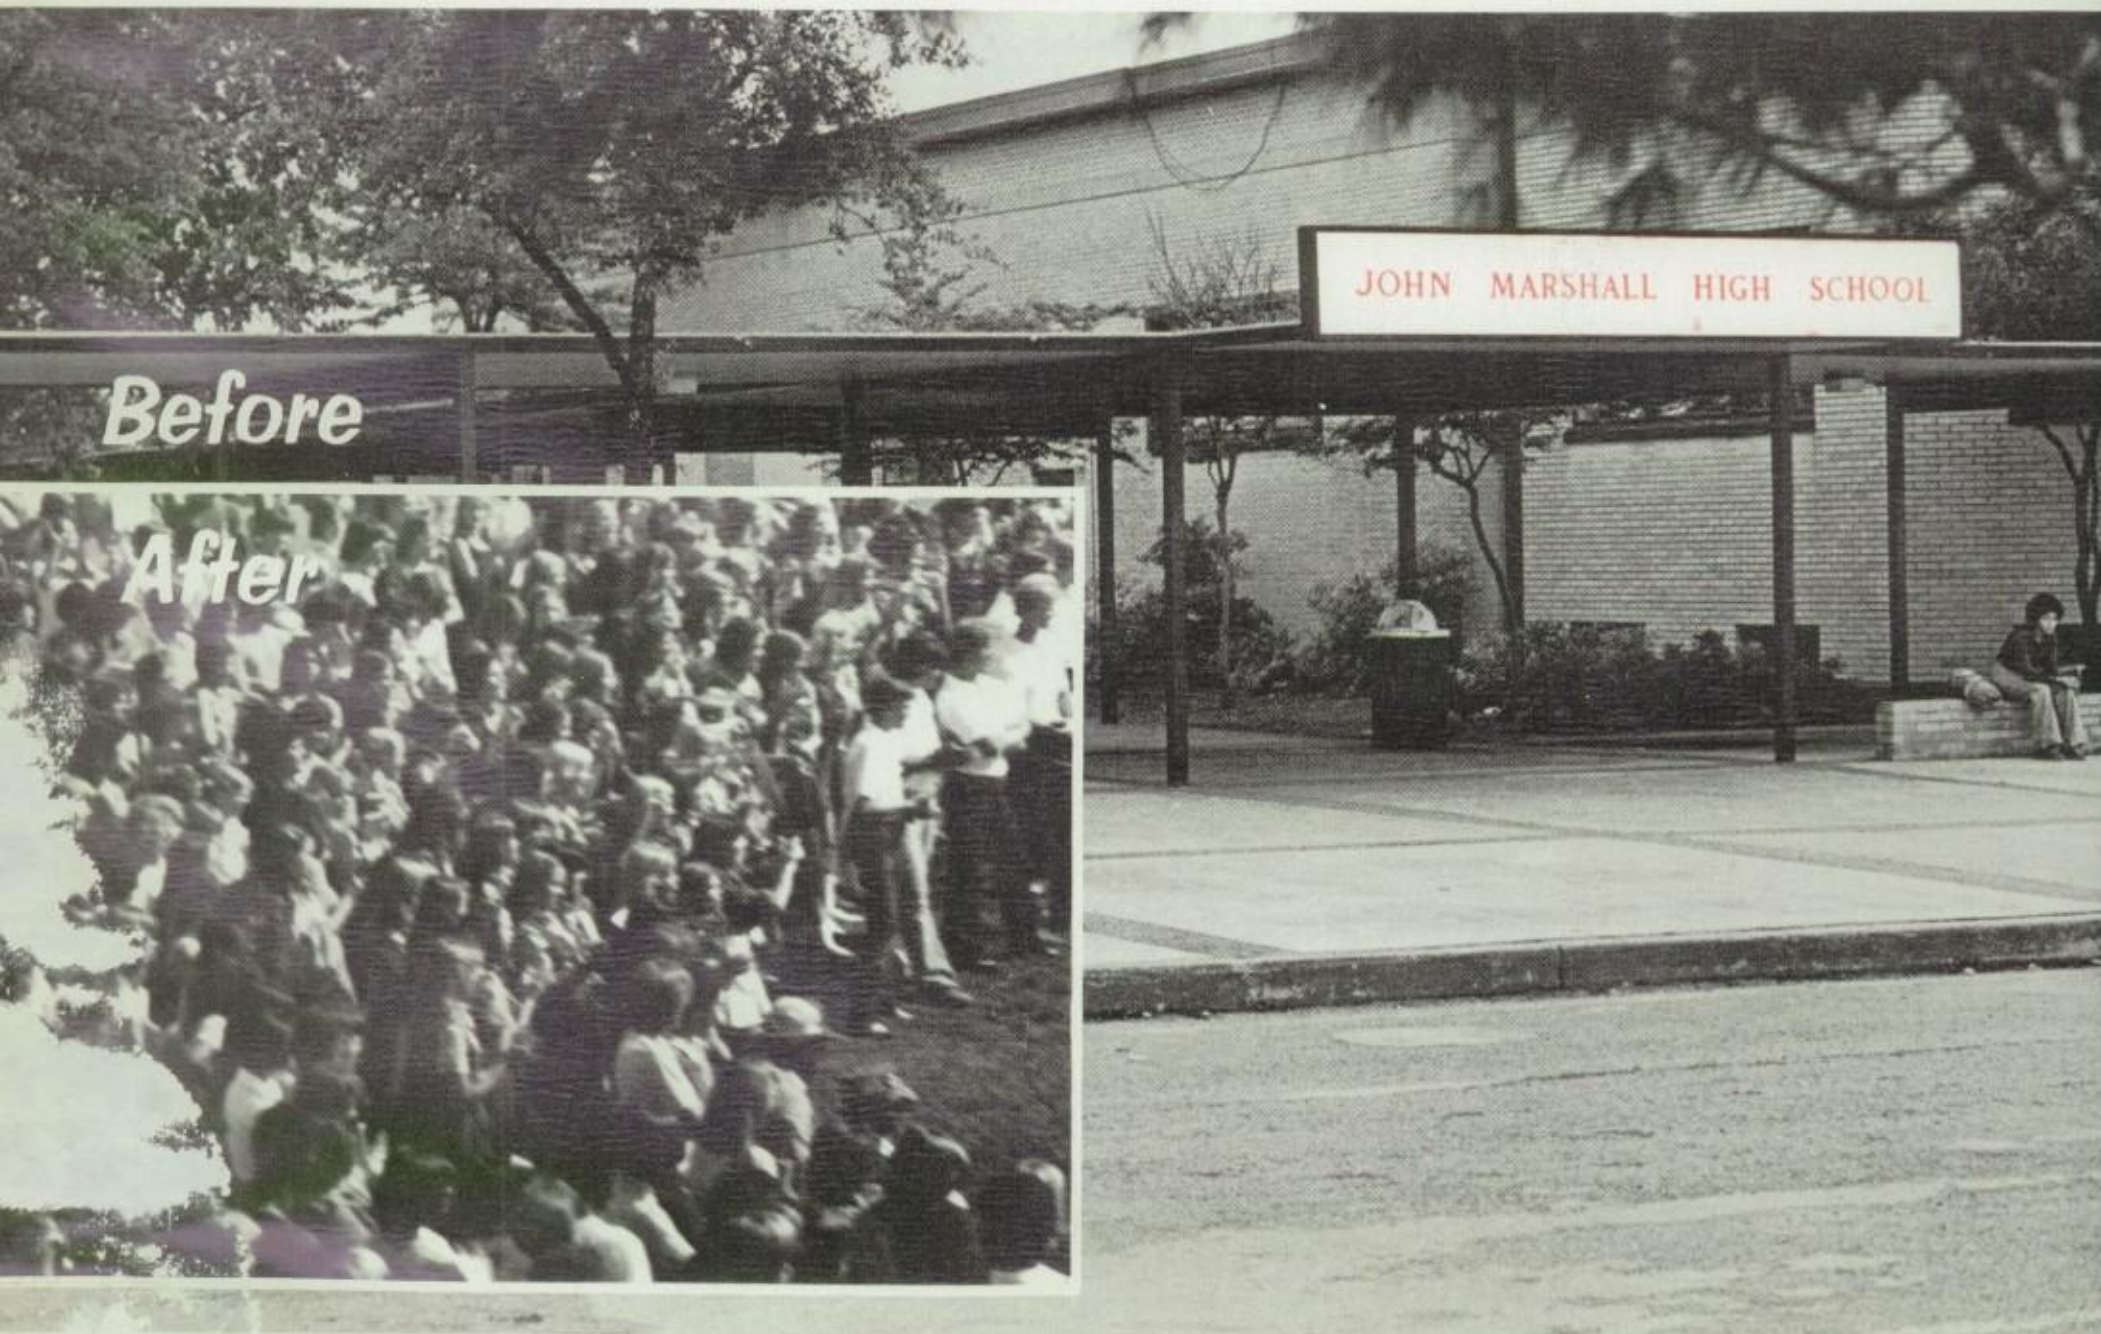

To the joy of many Northside students, the beginning of the 1977-78 school year was postponed from August 18, to September 6. This gave students approximately three more weeks to adjust to the idea of getting re-involved in school academics and activities.

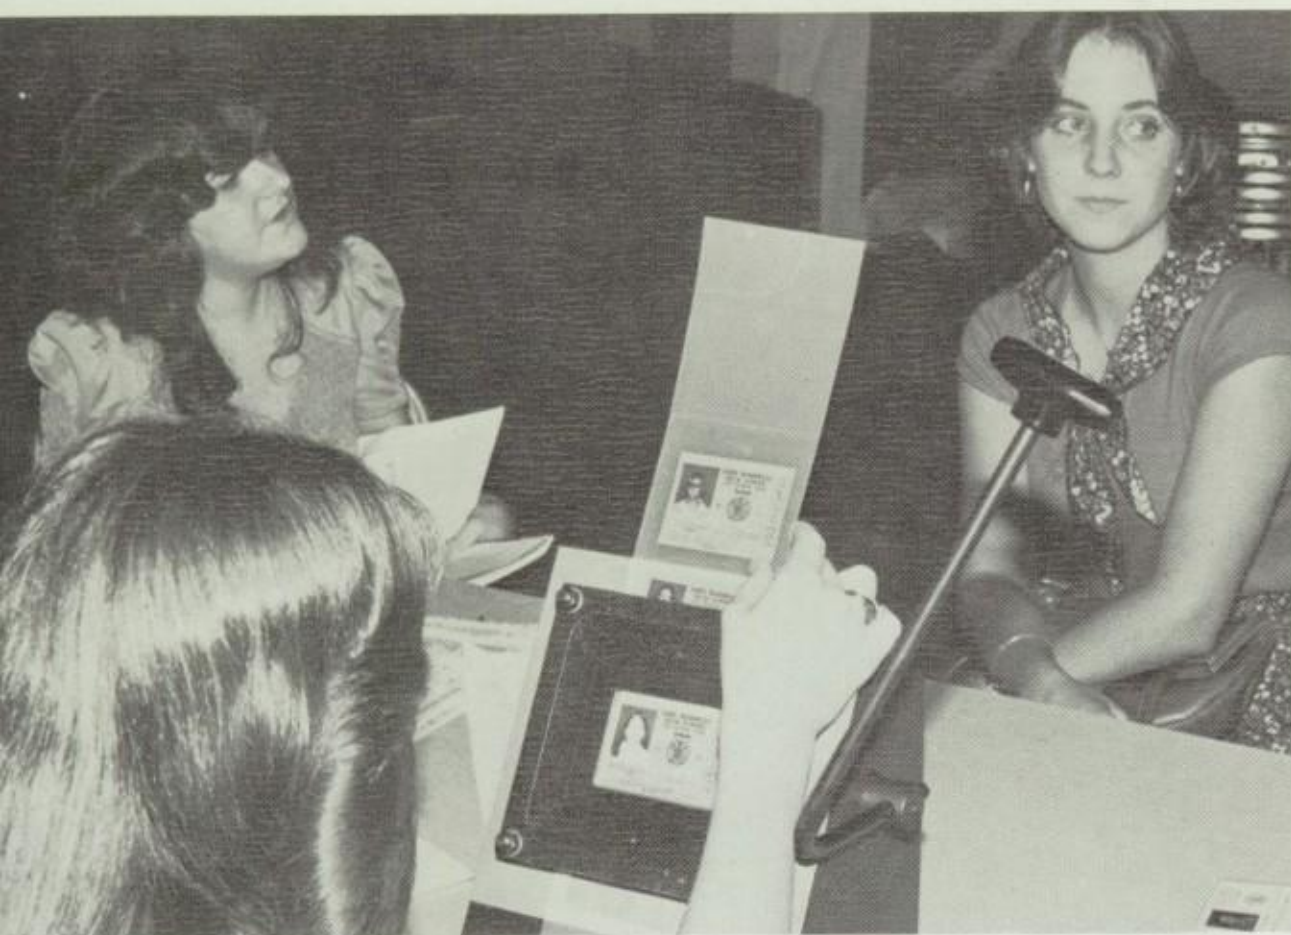

One time-consuming activity which many students experienced was the rescheduling of classes. Some students were seen according to priority. Others returned to school with their parents at 5:00 to wait two and three hours in a line that stretched from the counselor's office to the English wing. This overcrowded situation resulted from Marshall's largest enrollment to date. As of September 6, Marshall's student body was 3,497 strong.

Some lighter activities which accompanied the opening of school were the year-book signing party, student council's Howdy Dance, and OEA's making of student ID's.

Friday, November 11, at Northside Stadium, the fighting Rams converged with their rivals, the Holmes Huskies, to battle for the district title. A win was important to the Rams not only for the district crown, but also for a special event—Homecoming 1977.

Starting off the homecoming half-time festivities were the entertaining Ram band and the talented Ramblerette dance team. The band provided its usual precise performance, including a song and dance routine to "Hello Dolly". The dance team also sparkled with their rendition of a prop routine to "Don't Rain on my Parade". The half-time show performance was rewarded with a standing ovation from both the Marshall and the Holmes spectators.

Suddenly, the loud applause faded into an anticipating silence as the band flowed into the melancholy beginning of "MacArthur Park". Six elated, nervous duchesses walked out on to the field as the announcer David George summed up each girl's accomplishments over their four years at John Marshall.

Finally, the crowd focused their eyes on the 1976 Homecoming Queen, Lana Beard, and her escort, Ronnie Rogers, as they walked out to the 50 yard line. All movement on the field ceased for a moment, and then Lana, photographers, duchesses, and escorts, all rushed across the field to congratulate the 1977 Homecoming Queen, Gwen Andrews.

The fighting Rams bust through a run through made by the cheerleaders. Although Marshall lost the game, they came out of the season with a respectable 5-2 district record.

Homecoming Week November 7-12

Homecoming—a very special time for students of the past and present to celebrate a tradition. As in years past, Homecoming's success was due to the participation of the entire student body. Many months of planning and organization resulted in this one special week. The student council sold bids, made arrangements with florists, and contracted a band. The Junior class participated by fulfilling their responsibility of organizing the mum sale. The band and dance team practiced hours to outshine all previous performances for the special event. Not to be outdone, the cheerleaders decided to use a 50's theme at the pep rally, prompting groups, such as the choir, to create a skit for the pep rally.

The week's finale was the Homecoming Dance at Lackland Officers' Club. The club, with capacity of 500, was packed by over 600 enthusiastic Marshall students and faculty. To satisfy the appetites of the dancers, large quantities of dips, chips, and meatballs were served. The room echoed with the popular music of Pleasante Greene, as couples mingled from group to group. At 10:00 P.M., the six duchesses were introduced to the student body and faculty by David Brown, Student Council President. The success of the dance was easily measured by the sore feet and the tired smiles of the departing dancers.

Spoon River— the Time Is Now and Yesterday

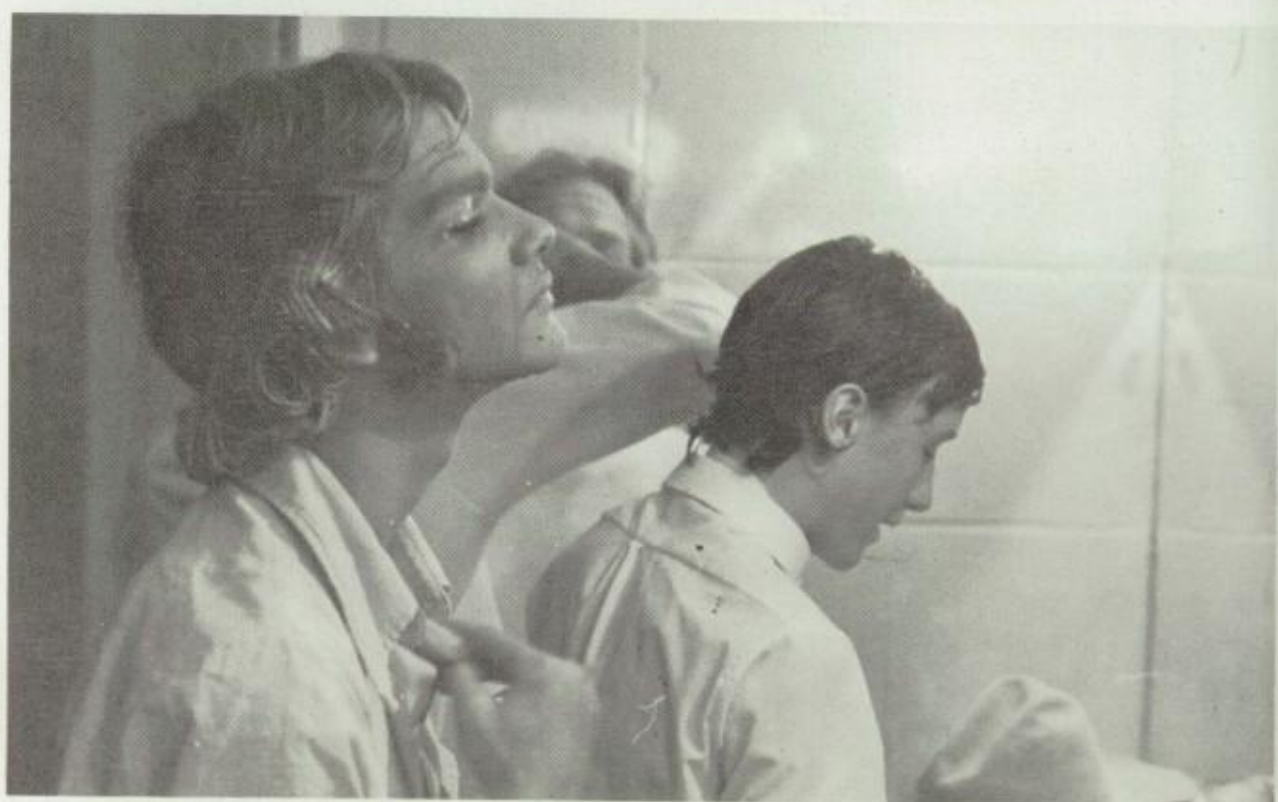

The Drama Club produced the play "Spoon River Anthology", which was adapted from a series of free verse epitaphs written by Edgar Lee Masters. In the play the former inhabitants of Spoon River speak from their graves about their bitter, unfulfilled lives in the dreary confines of a small town. Spoon River is this fictitious town.

The play combined the talents of 81 Marshall students under the direction of Marion Sweatmon. Fifty-three actors, two singers, four shadow actors, and the technical crew made up the cast.

Some memorable roles in the play included Hannah Armstrong, played by Kelly Dugan, who was a close friend of Abraham Lincoln. Another character was Randy Bomer's role of Lucius Atherton, Spoon River's Don Juan. Hamilton Greene, played by Mitch Gray, was the county judge who was the illegitimate son of a German house servant. Anita Condel portrayed the Spoon River teacher who went insane. This role was written by drama teacher Marion Sweatmon.

Spoon River was a different type of play which will not be soon forgotten.

The dramatic character of Pauline Barrett, portrayed by Kris Davis, killed herself with scissors after having a hysterectomy.

Randy Condron and Gene Sloan apply makeup in preparation for their performances in Spoon River Anthology.

"The honour of the flag must be upheld," proclaims Henry Phipps, who was played by Tom Williams.

Knowlt Hoheimer, played by Mike McCoy, ran off to war and became the "first fruits of Missionary Ridge."

The minister learns that his wife is committing adultery. Randy Condon portrayed the Reverend Amos Sibley in the play put on by drama club.

The ultimate optimist loved everything in life. Senior Annette Gonzalez created the role of Lucinda McFlock, who felt that "you have to love life to live life."

Mr. Gatti's

Hangouts

As a rule, week days were endured because we could look forward to weekend fun. Fun usually meant getting together with friends at a home or a local hangout.

Football season created the impetus for the fall social season. Mr. Gatti's was such a popular "after the game" spot that local police were invited by the management to join the fun. Fargo's and other pizza places also profited from the Friday night excursions.

While discotheques and Randy's were popular with the upperclassmen, The Sports Palace, Shenedoah Skate Center, and drive-in movies provided meeting places for the underclassmen.

Week days were easier to endure for seniors because of senior lunch privileges. Except for those seniors in band, pep squad, and work programs, most trekked to a favorite fast food spot for an hour's reprieve from studies. McDonalds, G.W. Jrs., Pizza Hut, Fargo's and Sonic were among the senior haunts.

SKATE CENTER

PUT-ONS

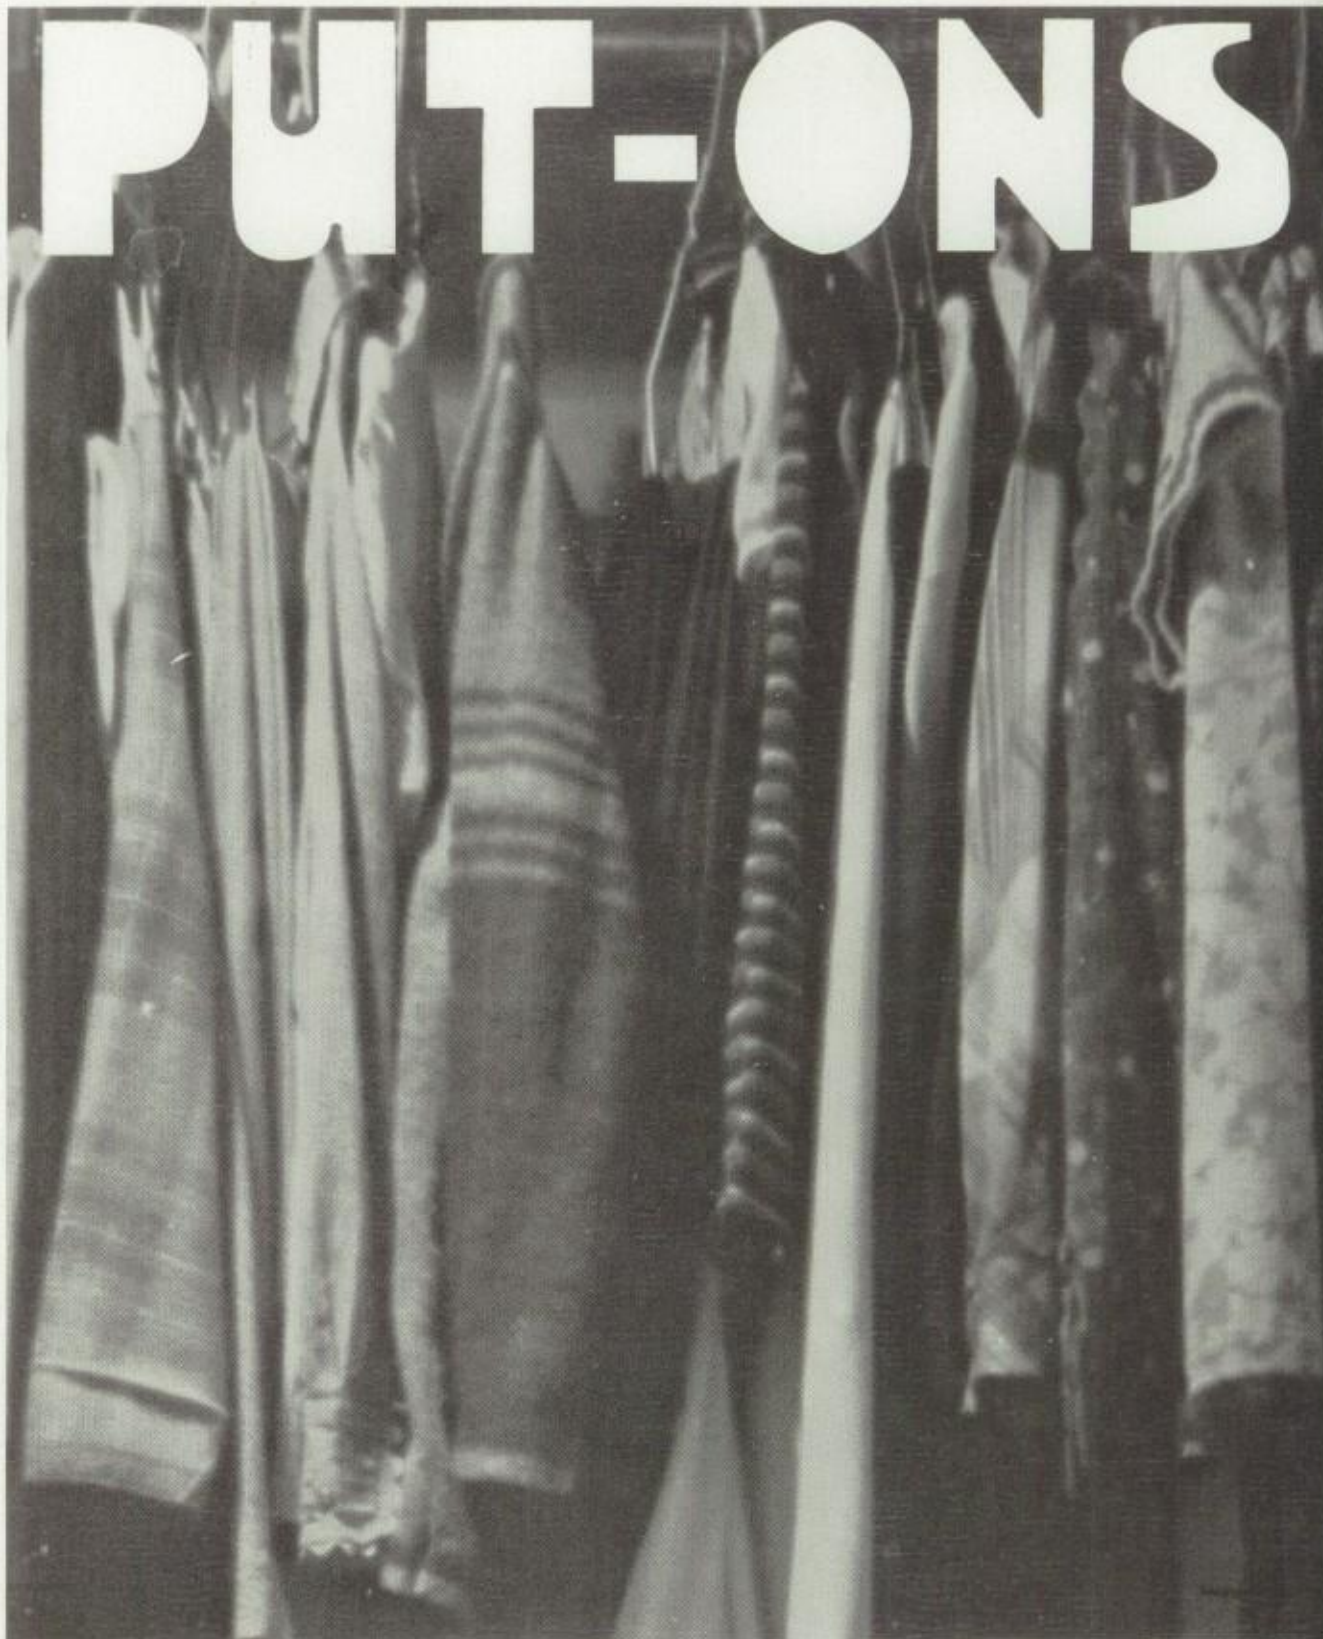

Fashions included everything from frayed jeans to tailored suits and slinky dresses. Dressing for comfort and fashion, students were never consistent in what they wore; nevertheless, a look was created that portrayed the styles of the late 1970's.

Narrow-legged jeans seemed to be the trend in casual wear. These were worn tucked in boots by some and with the usual casual shoes by others. Levis and down vests continued to be the trademark of the 'kicker' members of the school. Snap shirts with a quilted yoke accentuated the style. Belts, decorated with leather tooling and engraved buckles, displayed the wearer's name on back. Hats, ranging from bill caps to blocked hats, were adorned with ticket stubs, hat bands, and feathers.

A new "preppy" look appeared on campus this year. Khaki pants with shirts, most often assembled with navy or white coordinates, became a big fashion hit. Oxford shirts, or button-down shirts, with a pull-over sweater tied at the neck completed this look.

For girls, high-heeled shoes were getting higher and hemlines getting longer. Longer and more casual print skirts were teamed with t-tops and gauze shirts for a comfortable look. Wedge shoes were not as common, and the narrower heels brought a lighter air to the ever popular sundresses.

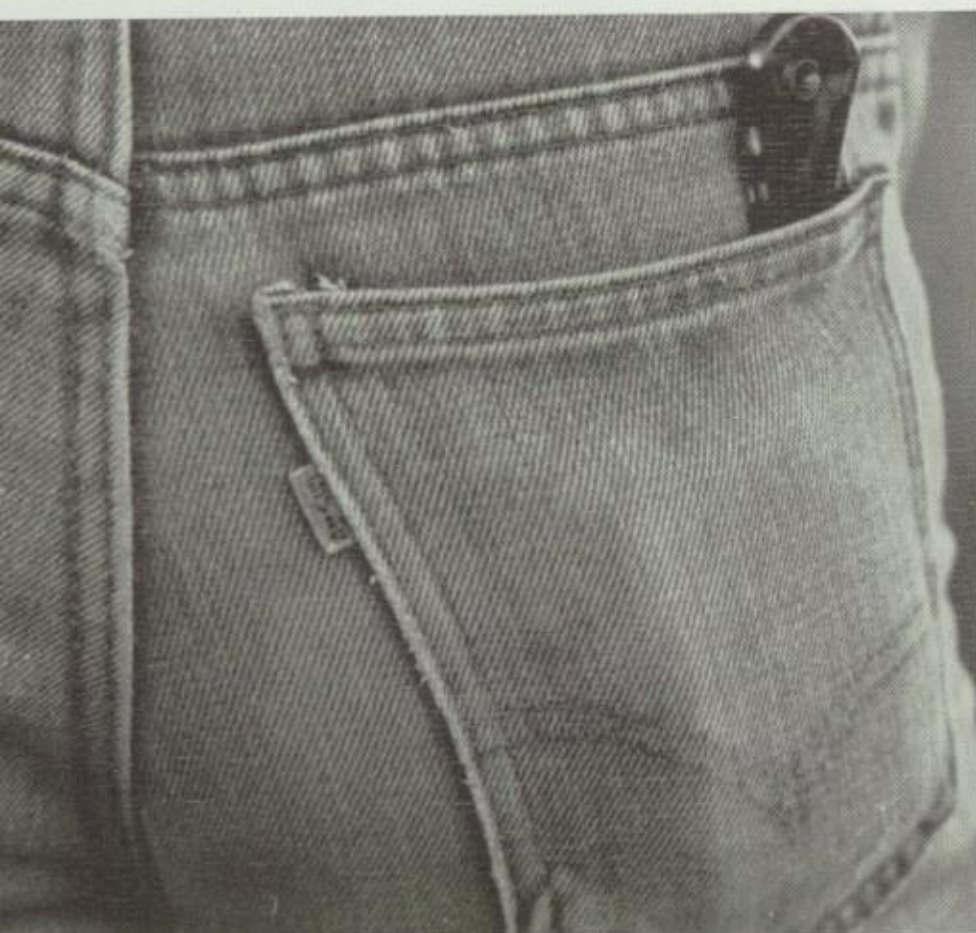

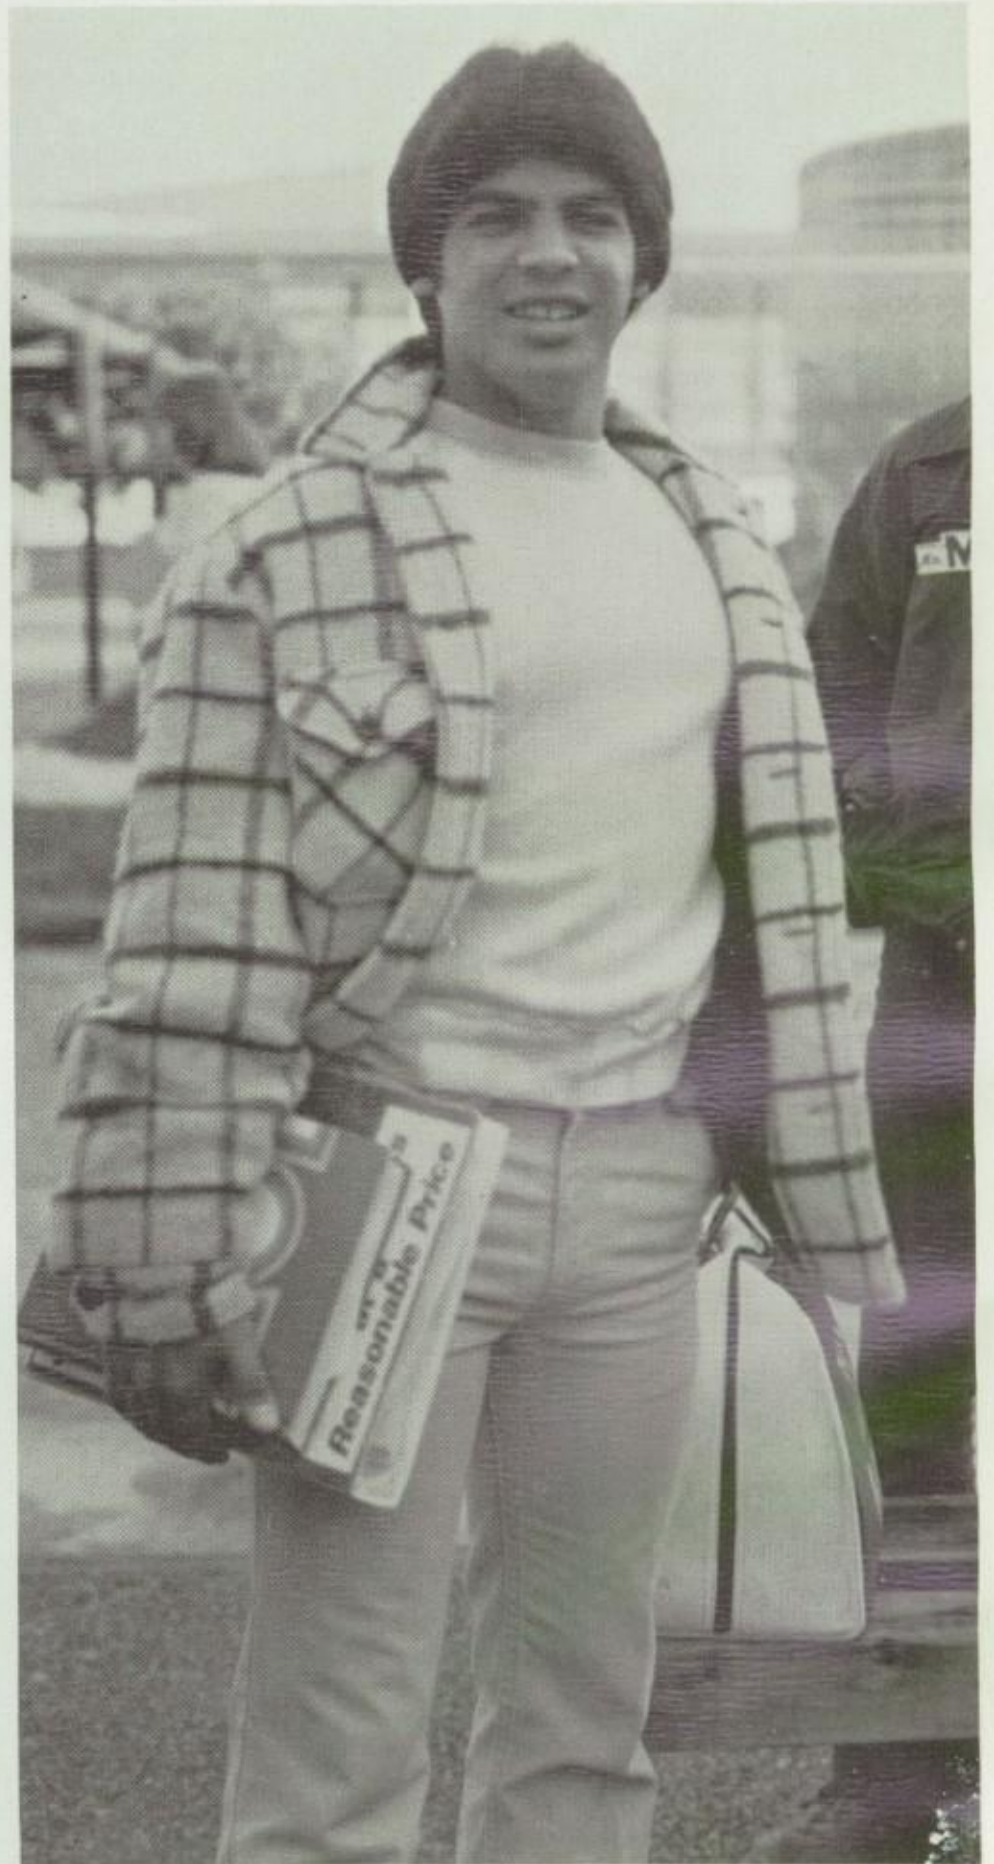

Ernie DeWinne shows off his hat and trademark—and another trademark, the faded circle hiding the can of Skoal.

Winter Wonderland at Snowman's Ball

On the night of December 10, Ramblerettes sponsored the annual Snowman's Ball. Glitter, lights, mistletoe, and trees, once again transformed the cafeteria into a winter wonderland scene.

Hours of hard work went into the preparation of this occasion. Helium balloons and snowflakes were suspended high above the dancers' heads. Garland and tinsel dangled on trees, while blinking lights illuminated the snowmen and candy canes hung on the walls.

Earlier in the week, the student body had nominated and voted on royalty for the dance. The 1977 Snowman's Ball royalty was announced at the dance.

Merry Marshall Christmas

"Even though the halls were not decked with boughs of holly, student spirit was still jolly."

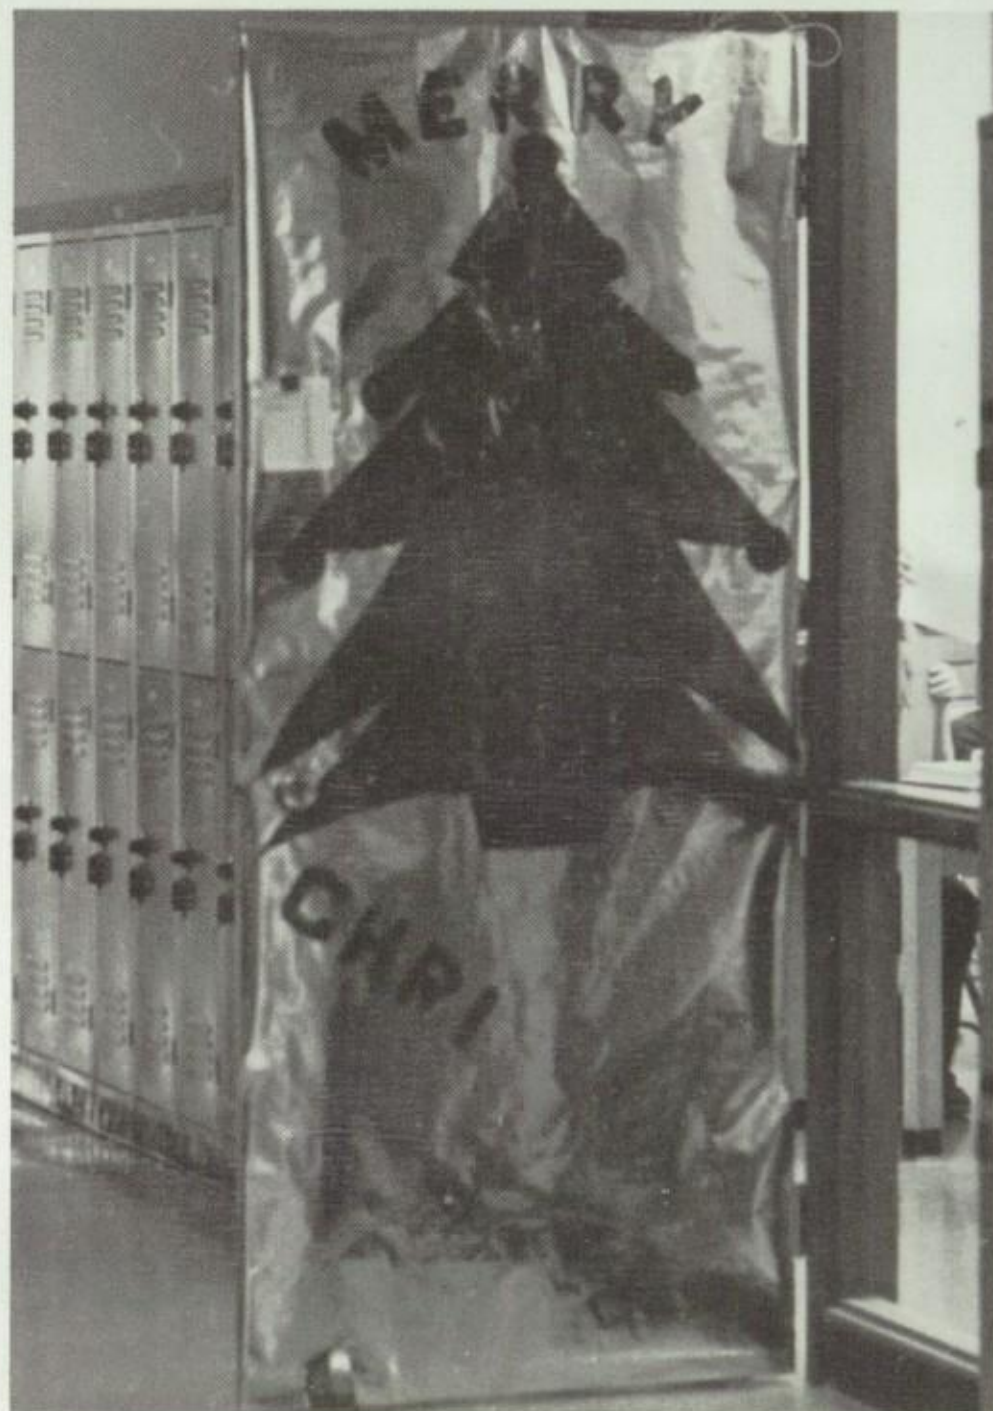

There was a great deal of controversy about decorations this year, but Marshall students found other ways to express their Christmas spirit without the usual garland, tinsel, and trees. Some of the activities included language clubs carolling on the river, the Snowman's Ball, and the Student Council door decorating contest.

The winner of the door decorating contest was Coach Kline's door. It received a blue ribbon.

Students Travel for Spring

Bavarian Spring

On Saturday of spring break Mr. Garry Turner and 20 Marshall students joined three Boerne High School students and departed for Europe. The chartered plane set down in Munich, Germany, where four days of sight-seeing took place. After skiing in Innsbruck, Austria and viewing beautiful Mirabell Gardens of Salzburg, the last day was spent touring the popular resort where Hitler and his lieutenants built their "Eagle's Nest".

East Coast

Marshall history teacher Mr. Richard Montgomery and 11 students boarded a chartered United Airlines plane at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday of spring break. Three days were spent in New York visiting such sights as the Statue of Liberty and the Empire State building. They also saw the Broadway play "The King and I". The next three days they toured Washington D.C. where they visited the White House, the Washington Monument, and other famous places. Last stop was Williamsburg, Virginia, where they visited colonial Jamestown. On the following Tuesday, their chartered plane landed in the beautiful Alamo City.

Combined Efforts Produce 'Really Big Talent Show'

The Annual Talent Show was a big success this year. The show was produced and directed by Mr. Loftin Kline with the help of the student council and Post 850. Alan Wartes and his group received the award for the musical group. Richard Rice won the best single award for his original song "We're Making it to the Top".

Patriots, Paragons Convene in Active Political Fashion

Amid a gymnasium draped with crepe paper and walls plastered with colorful posters, the Paragon and Patriot conventions convened.

Initiated to give students an understanding of the way the political system works, the conventions were spearheaded by teachers in the history department. In addition to providing political knowledge, the conventions also provided candidates for the next year's student council officers.

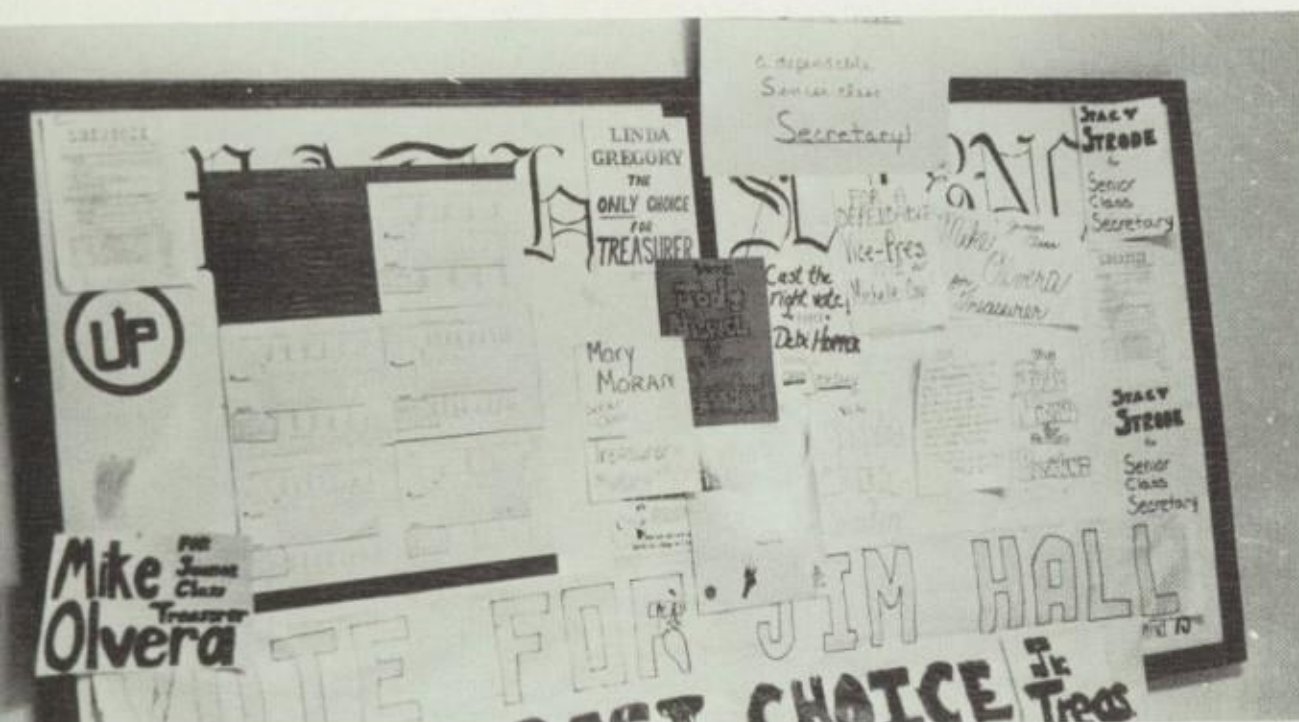

Following the familiar format, delegates presented appropriate gifts from their states to the national chairpersons. It was not uncommon for pandemonium to break out, but serious politics did prevail long enough to elect slates of candidates to present to the students for the all school election that was held the following week.

Delegate Devin Newkirk awaits his turn to vote.

Cathy Kern and Tony Taylor keep a handle on the work prior to convention.

Computer Voting Provides Speedy Election Results

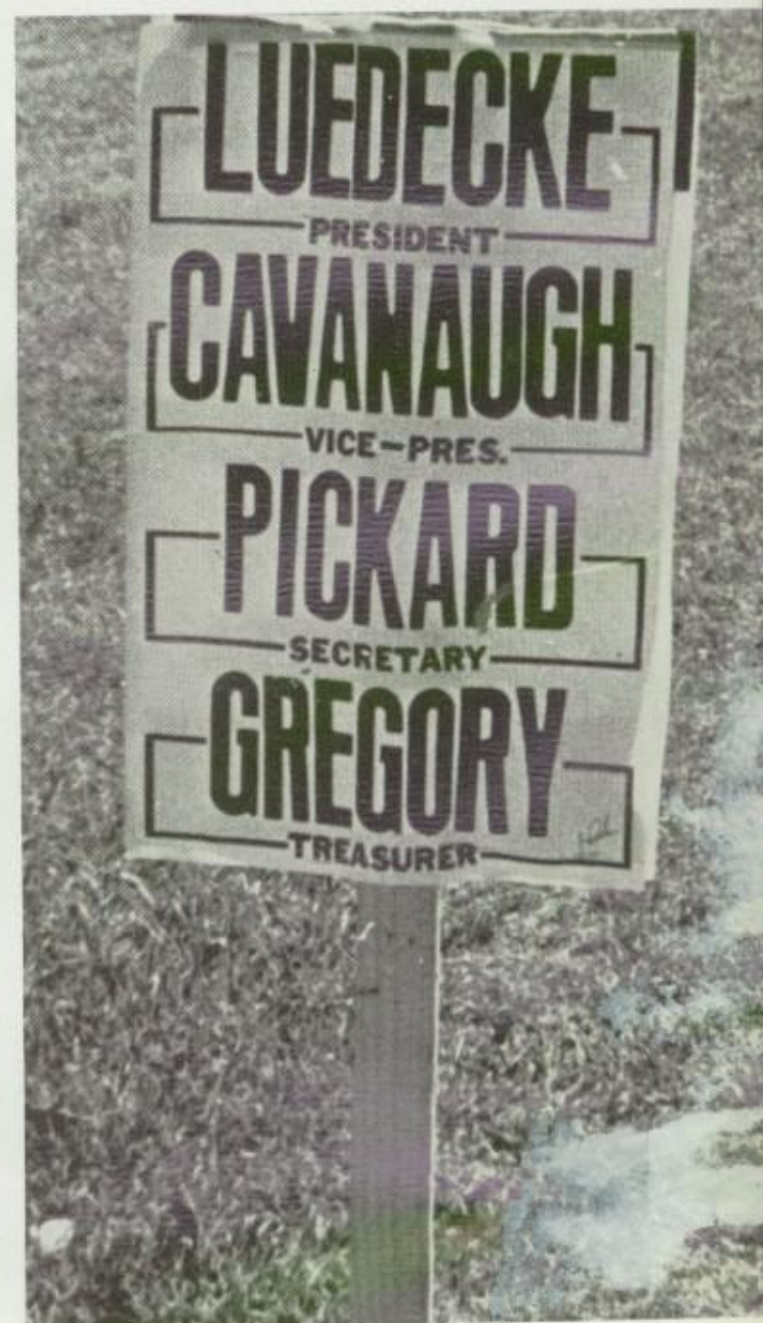

Spring elections were more hectic than usual. Student council officers were elected for both the John Marshall and Clark campuses. In addition to the councils, class officers were also named for both schools.

Energetic campaigners covered available bulletin boards with election propaganda and posted large eye-catching signs on the grassy areas around the campus. In order to provide speedy and accurate election results, students voted on computer cards. The results were available before school was dismissed for the day.

The bulletin board in the hallway in the English wing is representative of other areas throughout the campus before spring elections.

The Patriot Party ticket was stopped short of a clean sweep when final results showed that Paragon Party candidate Steve Barron had captured the council treasurer position.

Tony Davis and company put the final nail in a Paragon Party campaign sign.

10 Jacqui Gaudot videotapes the entire performance of "The Music Man."

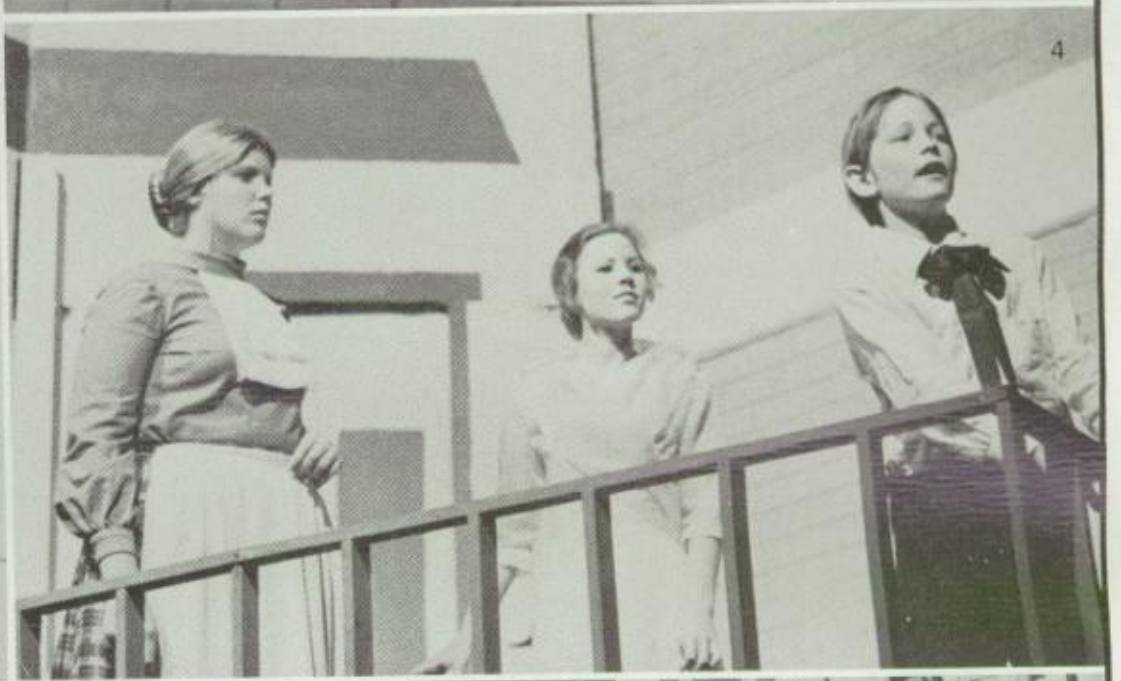

9 Miriam Orlando, Jim Jones, Susan Simms and Bobby Bloucher dance their way through the senior play. Most of the choreography for the play was done by Beverly Skipper, the John Marshall Dance Team director.

Every year the senior class presents and sponsors a play. Usually the play that results is quite good. This year was no exception. Contrary to popular belief that the senior play was going to flop, the results of the class of 1978's hard work was an excellent production of "The Music Man." With the seniors Jill Johnson and Matt Menger performing the lead roles and a chorus of 80 people behind them, director Marion Sweatmon managed to produce a memorable event.

Some of the people that helped make the play what it was were the dancers, six of whom were seniors; the orchestra, comprised of Ram Band members; and of course the backstage crew. Congratulations on a great job!

It Started Out Fad—and Ended up Fun

Scott Allison, Robin Cavanaugh, and Mary Story had just as good a time being junior servers.

"What'd you say?"—The cotton eyed joe can be done successfully in evening wear, as proved by the seniors of '78.

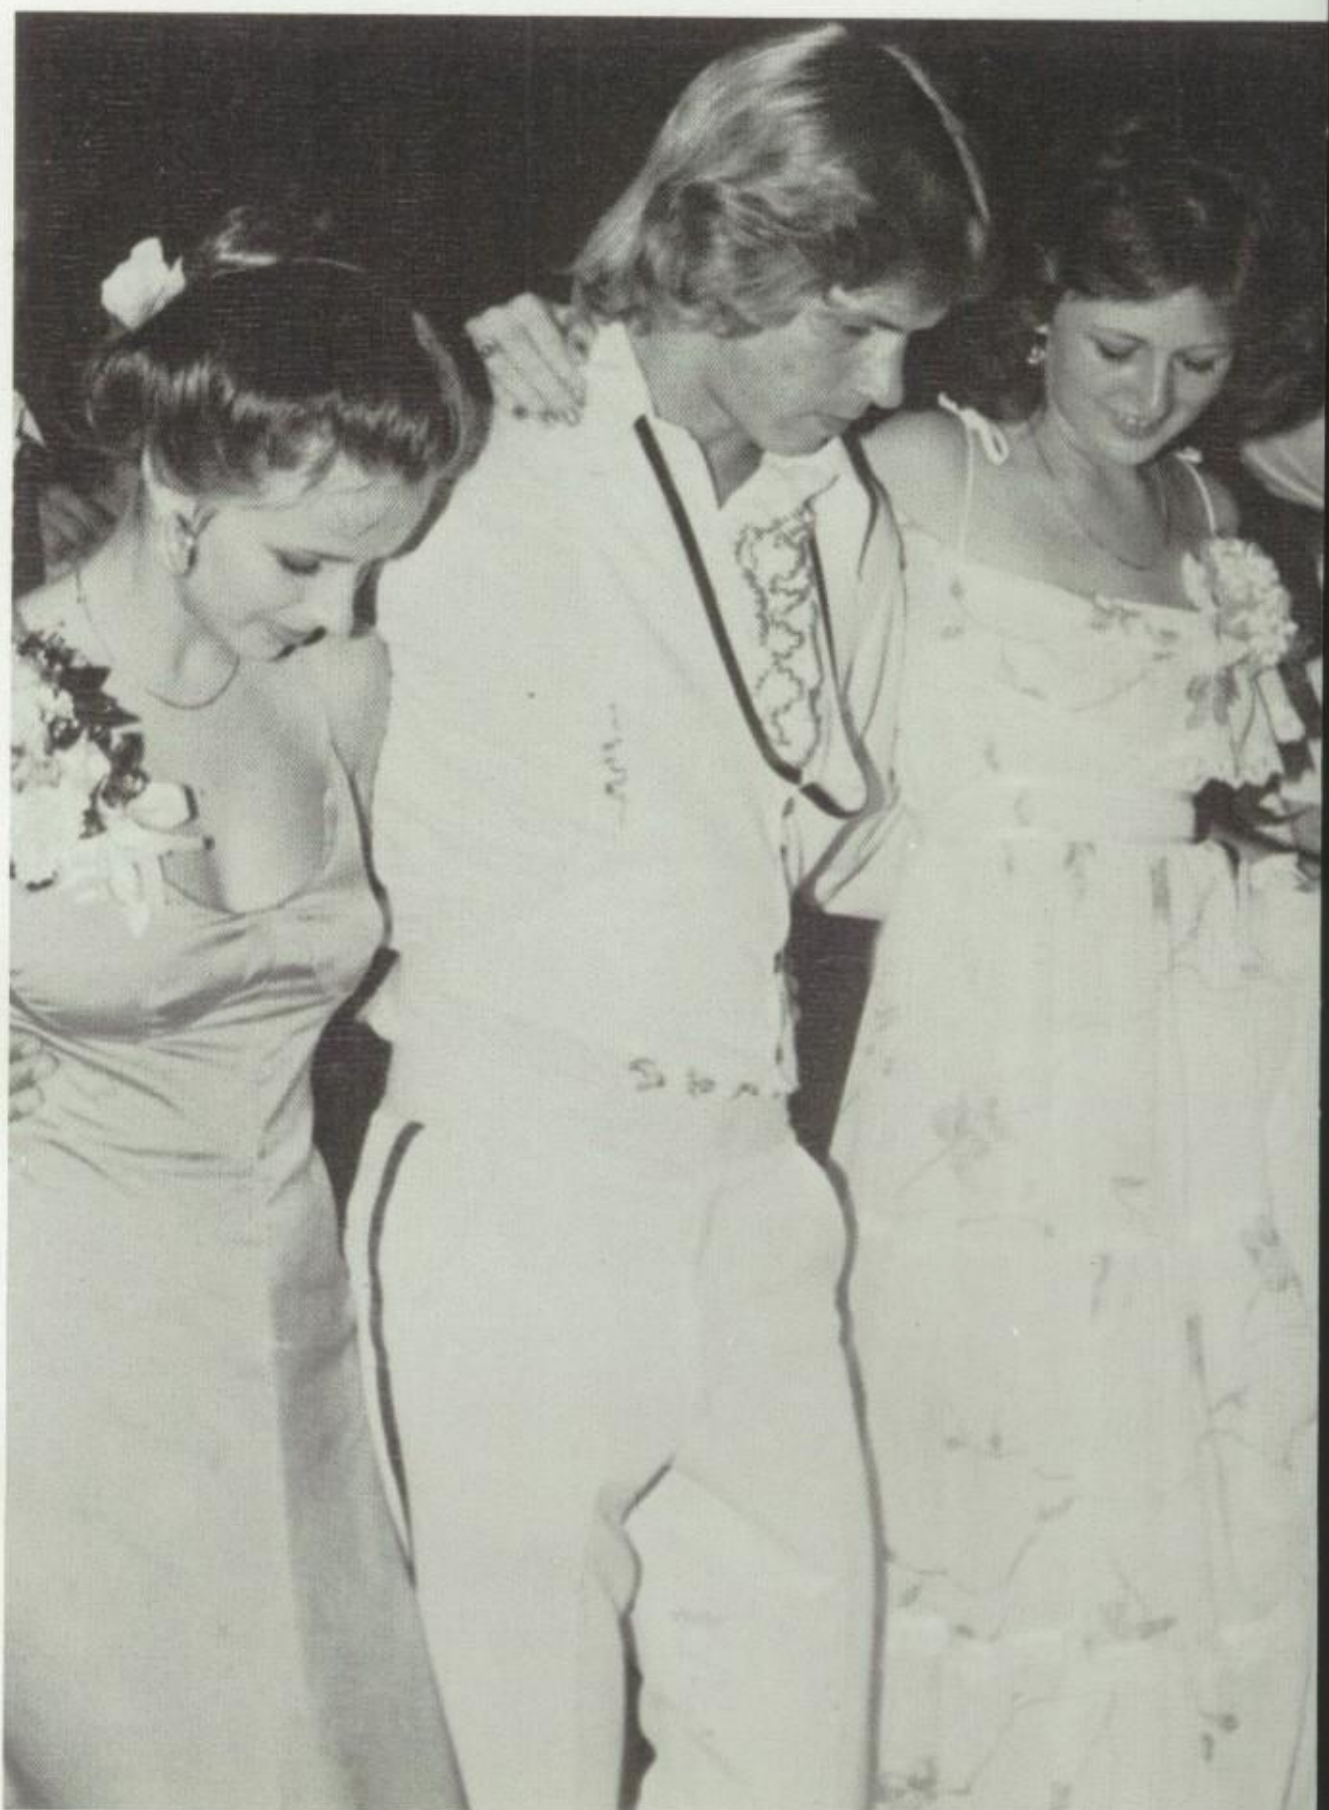

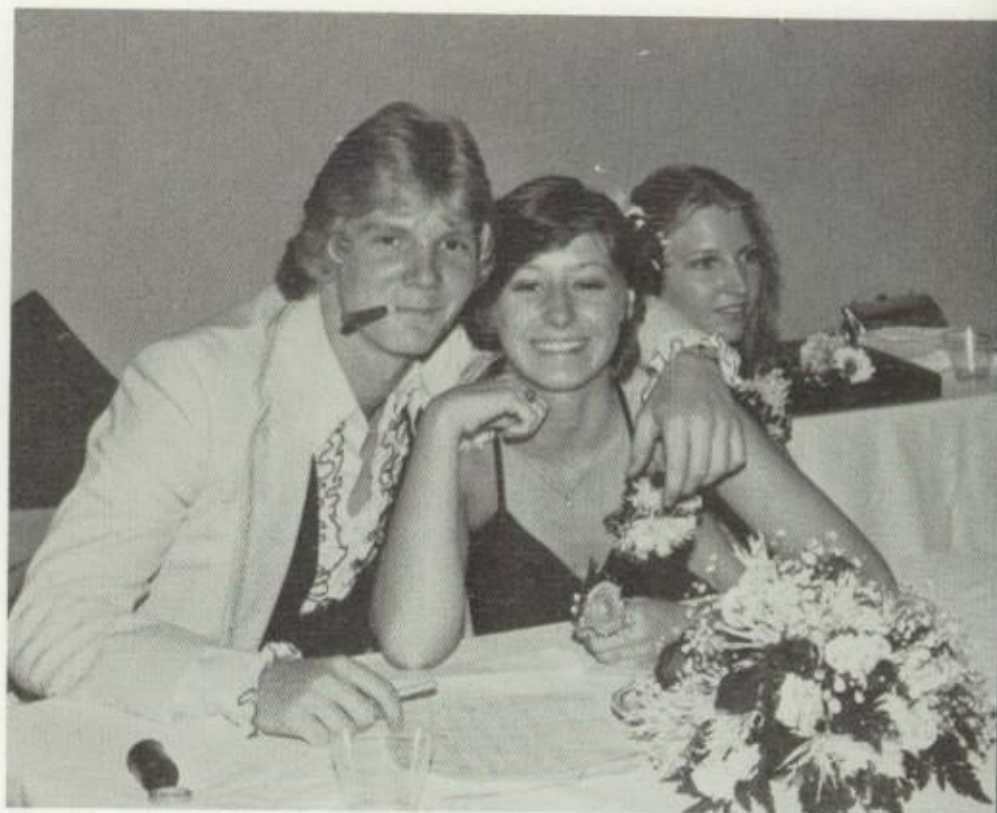

The Prom . . . the ultimate. Even if you don't have a special someone, you get one quick and go. Because you can't miss the Prom. Unthinkable.

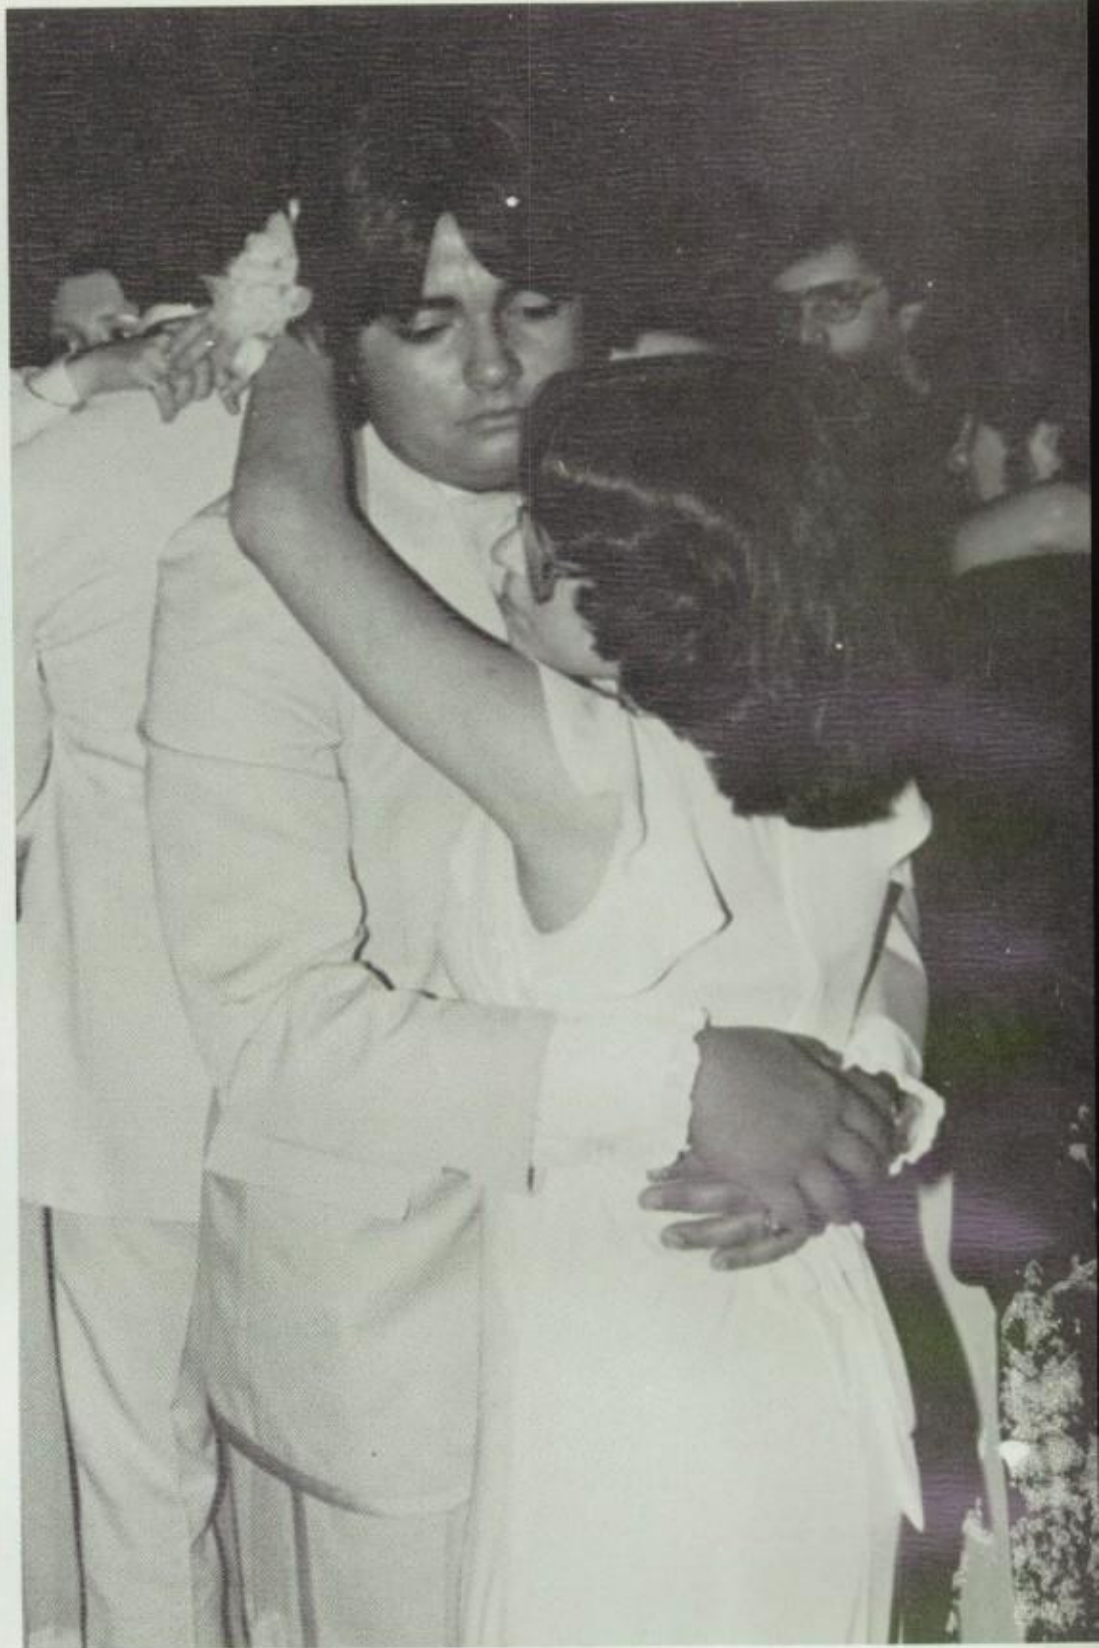

Two or three hours of preparation is just warming up. After an afternoon of washing, curling, fixing, etcetera, you take a look in the mirror to find that you're basically the same person you were before—just a little more cared for. Oh well, your date will have to take you the way you are.

And the dinner. Desperately trying to look 18 and mature. Giving those little knowing glances to the waiter. Stepping on your dress as you exit the restaurant. Or finding out, as you drive to Turtle Creek, that your tux is missing a crucial button. And entering the student-adorned country club to find music, dancing, and champagne glasses. And, of course, those omnipresent chaperones. You know, a few hours of good boogie can put a weary smile on any face. But you're just beginning . . .

Which party or which breakfast to go to? It seems like your steak and shrimp is barely down your throat before you're shoveling eggs, orange juice, and link sausage. And of course, you simply must ask everyone else where they ate, if they had a good time, and even who they're with.

Time races and dawn approaches. The activities of the last nine hours are causing you to stifle a yawn every minute or so. Who me? Tired? Sure let's party some more! And, at last, a tender goodnight and you gratefully remove that dress or tux that was so confining. A glance as you pass the bathroom mirror. Did you actually think you looked good? Oh well, to bed. And as your head sinks into the softness and your mind returns to those exhausting hours, you decide that it really was the ultimate. And you're pretty glad you went.

It Didn't Rain on Our Parade

On Friday, February 17, the Northside Independent School District allowed the students to voice their opinions concerning their graduation ceremonies. Contrary to a "fact-rumor bulletin" that had been put out by Marshall's administration stating that "Another invalid rumor is that the graduation ceremonies will be held in the Paul Taylor Field House—unless it rains that day the ceremonies will be held on the field," students were later informed that the ceremonies had actually been planned for inside the field house. The school board, after learning of the great unrest among students caused by the later decision to move the ceremonies into the field house, decided to let the seniors of all three NISD high schools vote on where they wanted the ceremonies held.

Supt. Ed Cody spoke to the seniors and presented school officials' reasons for holding commencement exercises indoors—air conditioning, better sound equipment, more dignified atmosphere, and no weather factor. Marshall voted overwhelmingly to hold ceremonies on the football field. The other district high schools voted in favor of their graduations in Paul Taylor Field House.

One of the students' reasons for wanting graduation exercises held in the stadium was the larger seating capacity. Nevertheless, each graduate was limited to seven tickets for his family and friends to attend. An exchange program was initiated to help find tickets for graduates who needed a larger number. Unfortunately, this was not very effective and many relatives and friends were present in thought only graduation night.

Practice for graduation was held at 9:30 Tuesday morning. It had rained the night before and there had been showers earlier that morning. After practicing on the field, everyone moved inside the field house to practice there. Just in case . . . But Luck was on our side—the showers cleared in the early afternoon, and it didn't rain on our parade after all.

'A Lot of Hassle for a Little Tassel'

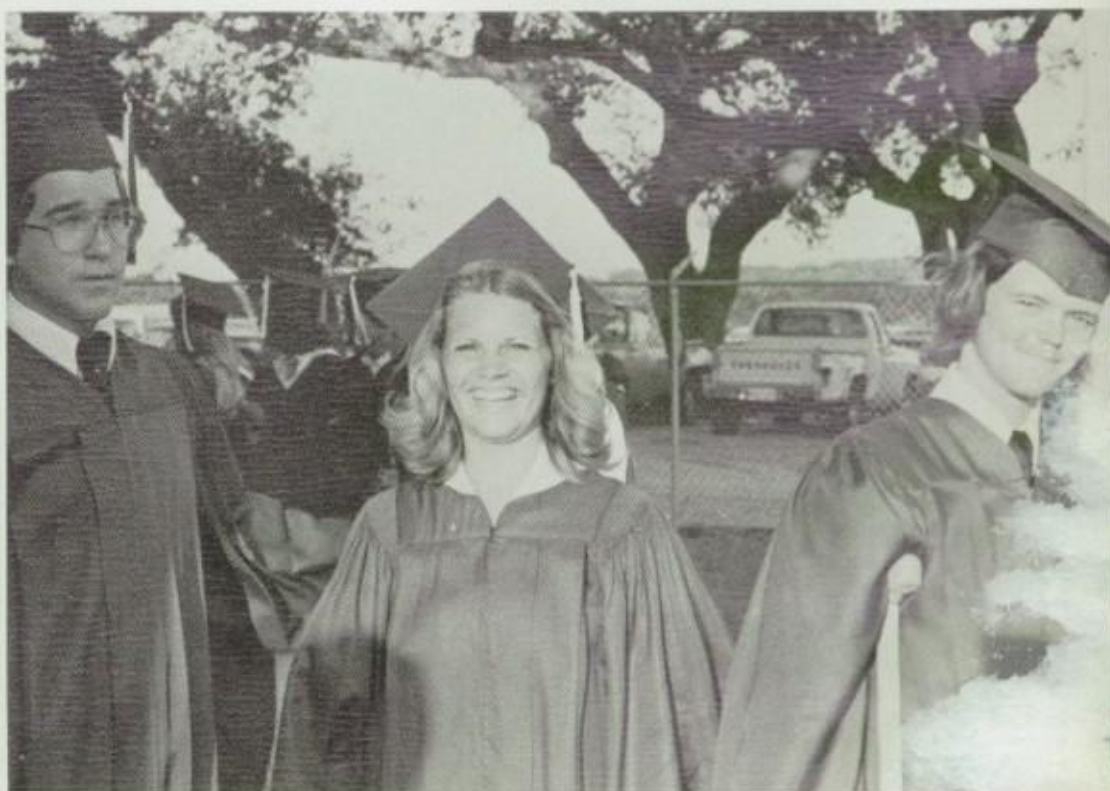

John Rater, Christy Parsons, Cindy Fox, and Holly Howland were among the seniors who helped in the distribution of the tickets for the commencement exercises.

Anticipation builds as players await the coin-toss.

The sports scene at Marshall carried a lot of weight. Not only did it provide an outlet for the basic need to compete, but also it created a special unity, something the students and community could rally around. To see capacity crowds at football, basketball, baseball, and volleyball games, with students and parents alike clad in maroon and white, one could sense an added dimension in school pride. Even if that maroon and white team did not always win, hopefully the pride experienced by its supporters was strong enough to be carried out of the stadium or gym and back to school and community.

This pride was not only felt by those who supported the various athletic events, but also those who competed in the various individual and team sports. The exhilaration of heading for the top, chalking up victory after victory as a result of hard work, long practices and sheer determination, returned achievement and honors to those individuals. District, bi-district, and regional play-offs were strong indicators of the achievement of individuals as winning became consistent. Most importantly, sports benefitted all, competitors and spectators alike. For win or lose, all experienced that special unity called pride.

Rams Show Strength in '77

The Mighty Rams had a rewarding season. They won five of their last seven games. Once again the Rams played Holmes for the last game and the district championship. Holmes came out on top this time, 10-7, and advanced to regional competition before being eliminated by Lee. The 1977 season saw the Marshall team demonstrating the hardnosed football each week that they have become known for, never being outthit or out-hustled.

It Is the Quality of the Struggle That Counts

Similar to the last several years at Marshall, the season began on a high note. The Rams were picked to win their district by area sportscasters before the season began, and although we didn't quite make it, the players never stopped hustling, the fans never stopped screaming, and the thrill never stopped inciting everyone involved to get excited.

J.V. Takes District— Freshmen Look Strong

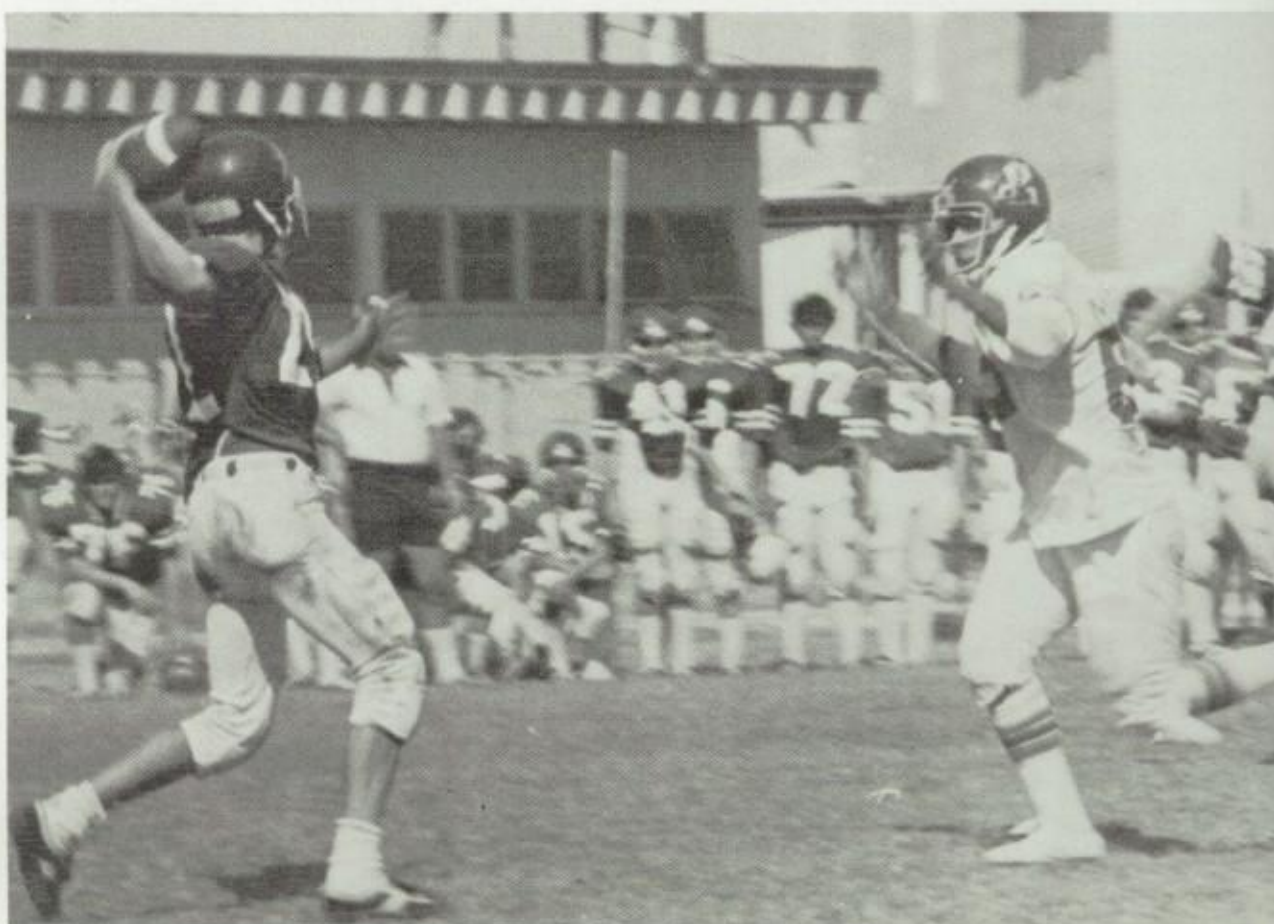

The Ram J.V. and Freshman football program went well this year. The freshman team won eight and lost seven of their games and the J.V. team won the district for the second year in a row. The football program was split after the season ended as players trained separately for their future teams at either Marshall or Clark. With the success of the Junior Varsity, the Varsity team should be strong next year.

The volleyball program excelled again last year with a district championship season. Coming off of a district championship season in '76, the well prepared team concluded their season undefeated in district play. The commitment, practice, and unity of the teams combined to make a closely-knit group of young ladies who could really play some volleyball. Their motto was "We can do anything we put our minds to" and "We believe", and with this belief and their effervescent coaches, Kathy Shackelford and Sherry Jackson, they became known city-wide for their talent.

Success for the Future

The Ram J.V. and Freshman teams also had successful seasons this year. "The great participation in the program will show up in the future teams at Marshall and Clark", stated Coach Jackson. Both teams had good records, winning 66% of their matches. They faced tough opponents, especially in the tournaments. The freshmen won consolation in the Northeast Tournament, despite some very stiff competition.

So This Is How It Is!

It was 1966 when Marshall's basketball team took the state championship. The Rams were classified as a three-A school then and since becoming a four-A school in 1967, they had never had a winning season—until Marshall players put another date in everyone's memory: 1978. They had a powerful team that stomped nearly everyone who opposed them. The Rams began by winning the Laredo Tournament, then took first place in the Northside Tournament, and finally took championship honors at the St. Mary's Tournament.

They lost only two games in district play. At midseason, a slightly overconfident Marshall team was awakened as the Edgewood Raiders defeated the Rams. "This defeat made us realize that we couldn't beat a team without playing them first," stated senior Tony Bellanger. Jack Broberg, team co-captain added, "The loss made us come back strong. We fought back against Memorial and stomped them 101-79." The Rams lost only one more district game, against Memorial in the second round. It didn't take San Antonio schools long to realize the power of the Marshall Rams.

Being Winners

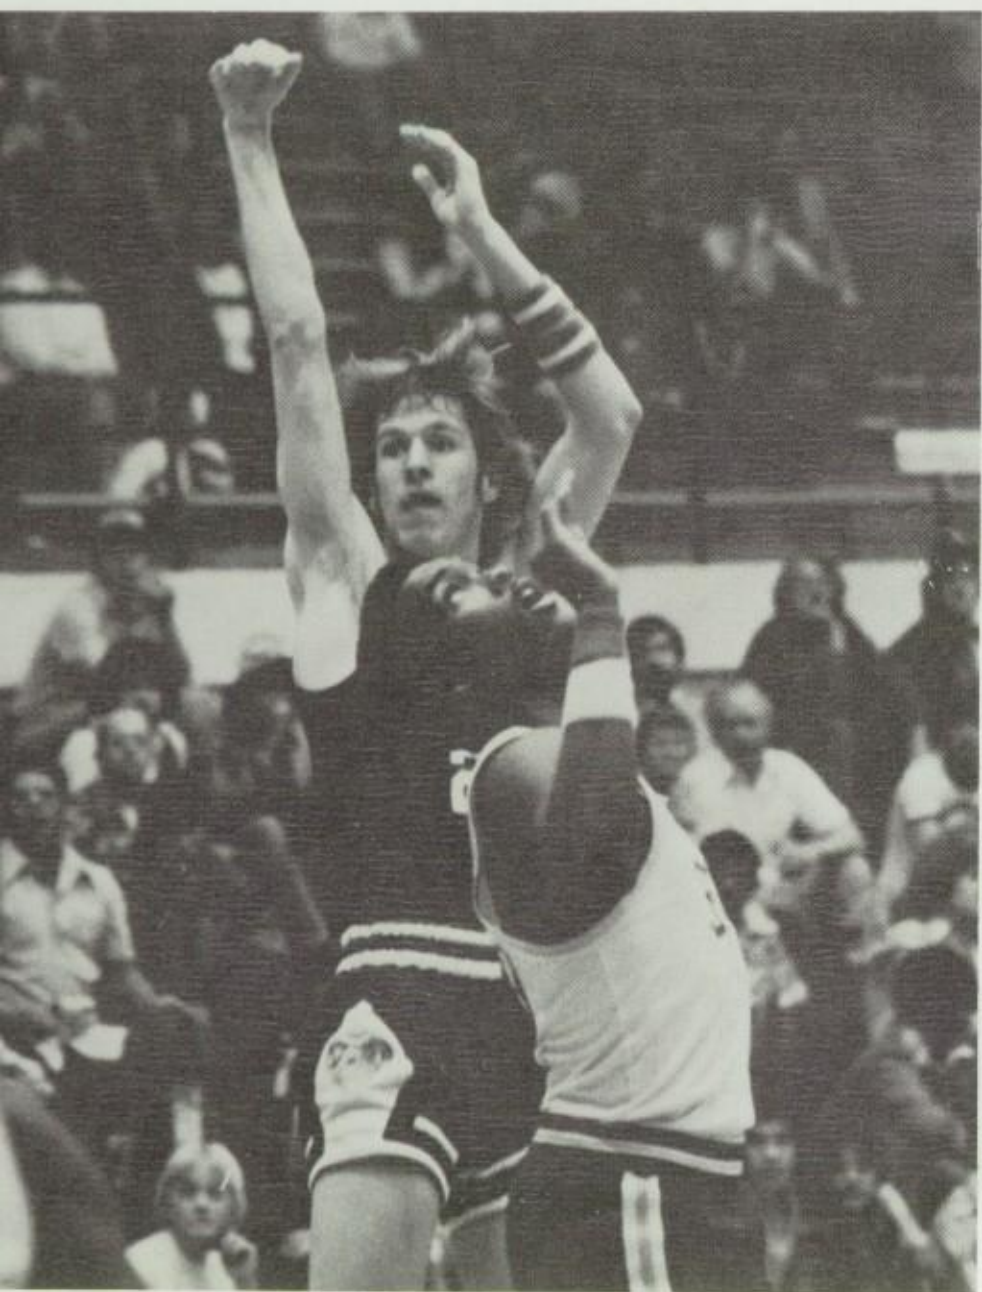

The Rams entered the play-offs after defeating the Memorial Minutemen 59-43. They took the 30-AAAA crown for the first time since 1970. Then came a journey to Corpus Christi to play Laredo Nixon, the 29-AAAA district winner. The score was tied 20-20 at the end of the first quarter but the Marshall Rams played some brilliant basketball and hit 55% of their shots from the floor. They took the game 81-71 and became one of only 16 teams in Texas to stay alive in playoff games.

The Rams advanced to the regional play-offs and were matched against the Trojans of Corpus Christi Moody. The two teams met on a Friday night in blossom athletic center. The Rams held even with the Trojans point-wise through the first three quarters but the Moody players pulled it off 68-62. The Rams advanced further than they had in 11 years and they sparked the spirit and pride of an entire school along the way.

For the second year in a row, the junior varsity team had a fantastic season. The J.V. Rams were undefeated until their last game in the third round of the Northeast tournament. Bob Murphy coached these young men who completed their season with a 27-1 record. They took first place in both the Marshall and South San tournaments. The players usually beat their opponents by large measures, approximately 15 points per game. They had only one close call, when they beat Roosevelt by one point. They were a powerhouse and according to junior Jerry Glaser, "The strength of the J.V. should prove to be an asset to the varsity team next year, despite the fact that some of the players will be going to Clark."

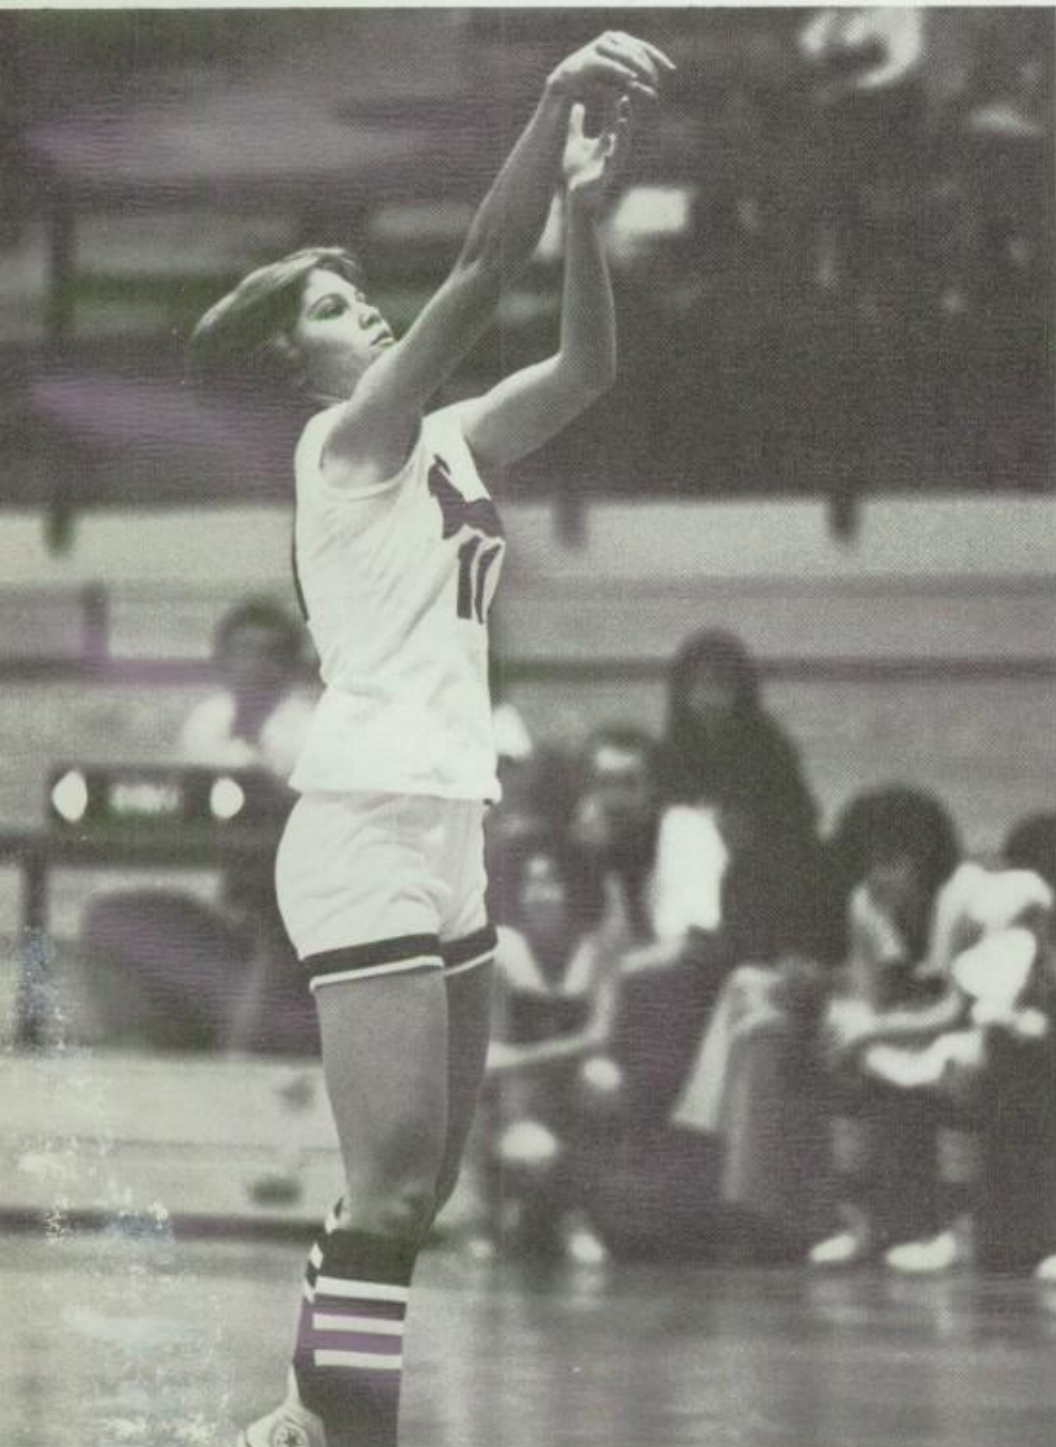

There shouldn't be any problem with the J.V. team next year from the looks of the freshman team. These young men also had a winning season, capturing first place in the Northside and John Jay tournaments. The two teams' combined season record was 32-4.

Freshman ball was also a new game. The fish netters played full court ball as well. They proved that they could handle this type of game by taking second place in the Jay tournament on January 27 and 28. The girls wound up their season second in district with an impressive 11-5 record.

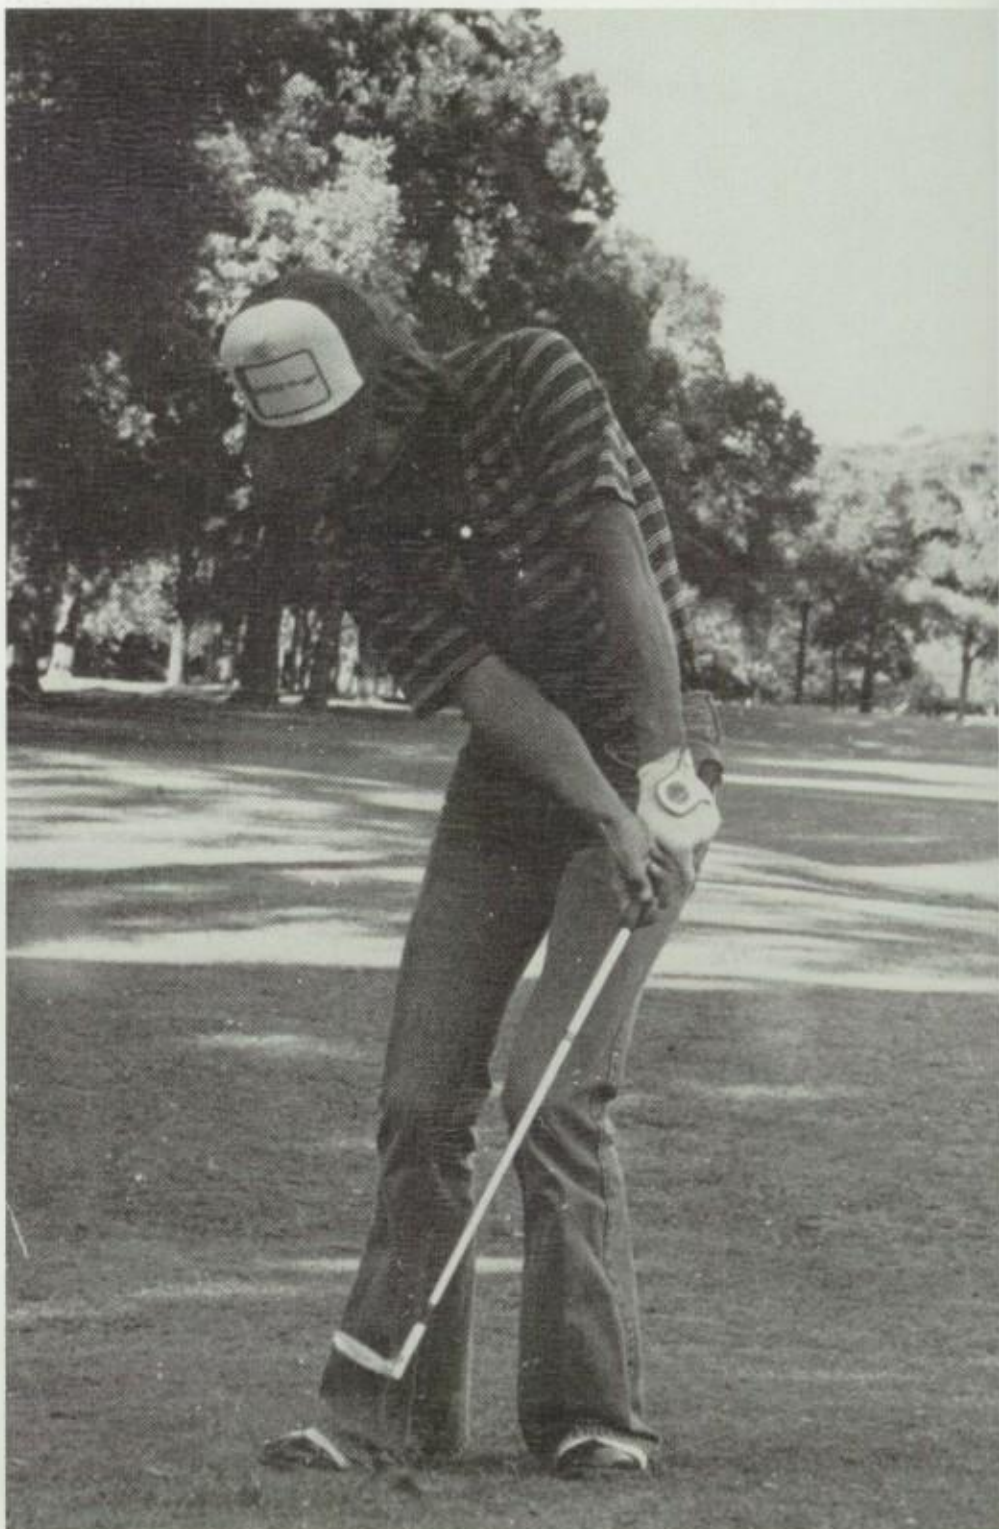

Fore!

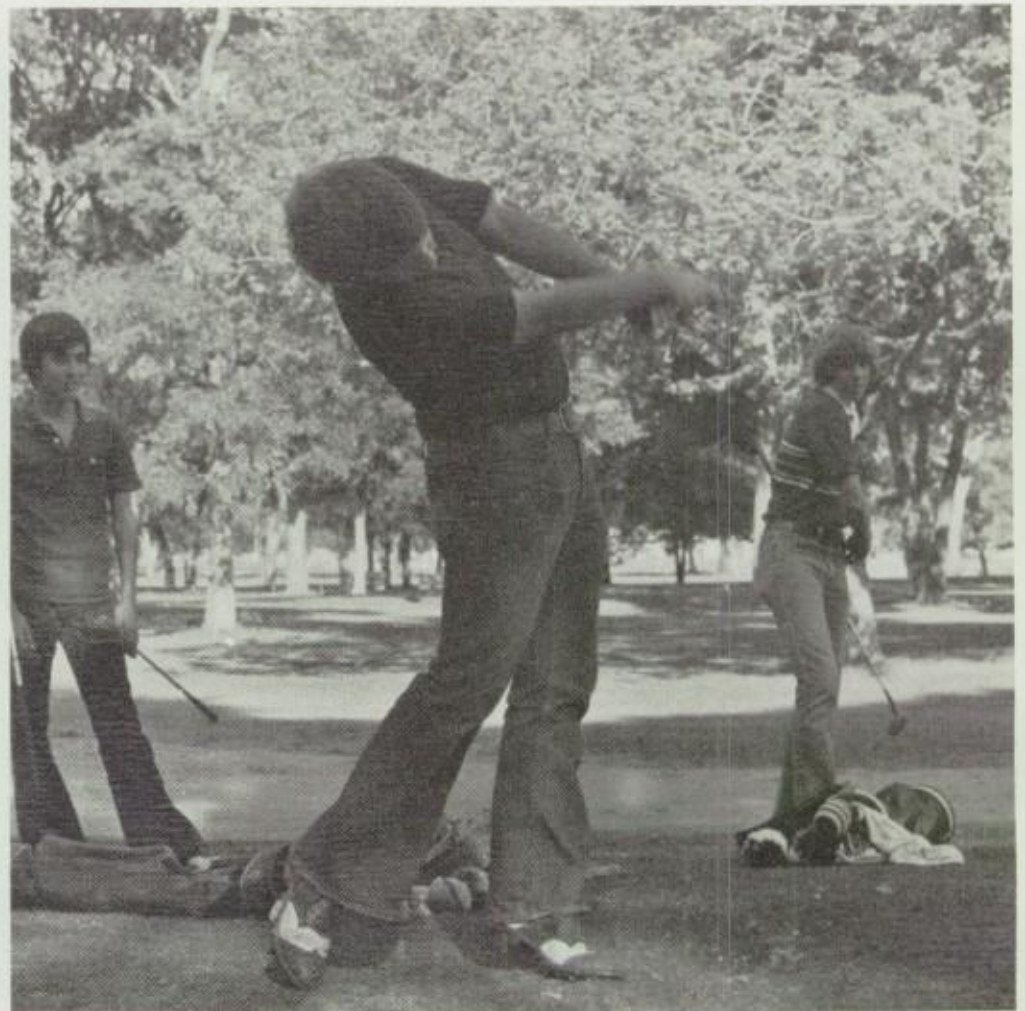

The golf team was a lot more active than the neutral observer may have expected. The teams, varsity and JV participated together in 13 dual meets. Their record was 10 and 3. They placed high in every meet they entered, and at the IGAST tournament in Hondo, the Ram JV team placed sixth among other school varsity teams. There were individual achievers as well. In the Waterwood Golf Resort Tournament, Jerry Collins took second medalist honors. In the Demolay Tournament, Ben Weber got fourth medalist. In the IGAST Tournament, Eddie O'Malley won the second medalist award. The district tourney, which saw the varsity receiving first place and the JV third, was the spot for Ben Weber to receive second medalist and Buck Weber, third medalist.

Anyone for Winning?

The John Marshall tennis team said "yes". And win they did. Six first place trophies to be exact. The team took first place in the Harlendale, San Antonio, John Marshall, Round Robin, Round Robin Overall, and the 30-AAAA District meet. The Varsity team was comprised of girls singles players, Melinda Miller and Wanda Hadnott. The boys singles competitors were Steve Warrick and George Rodriguez. The girls doubles players were Robin Weatherford and Donna Keller, and Ruth Walker and Becky Zaike. George Fidone and Chris Murray, and Mark Mellin and Joe Felan were the players for boys doubles. The success of the team was credited to the individual talent of the players themselves and the super coaching. Marian Rosen took over the coaching position just a short year before and the team's enthusiasm was evidence of her effect on them. The team was also overflowing with talent. There were members of the JV team that could not play often because there were so many people involved in the tennis program. This talent also insures the successful participation in city tournaments in future years.

Makin' Some Tracks!

The Ram Tracksters of 1978 were very successful indeed. Individuals are the strength of any track team. The individuals that comprised the Ram team made the team something to watch. The top five individual scorers in the meets were Todd Scrimpsheer, 76 points; Jamie Bozeman, 56 points; Mark Manwaring, 68 points; Reed Gabriel, 27 points; Kirby Pair, 13 points. At the district meet Mark Manwaring broke the school record for the mile with a time of 4:22.8. Jamie Bozeman tied the school record in the 100 yard dash at the NE Invitational, Alamo Relays, and District meets with a time of 9.8.

The cross-country team also had a good season. Outstanding participants were Reed Gabriel, Mark Manwaring, Kent Welkener, Tris Castaneda, Eddie Madrigal, Luis Castro, and Mike Strode.

Those Girls Can Run!

Marshall has had a female track program for only six years. The 1978 season was the most successful ever for the girl runners, leapers, and throwers. The team accumulated many team points in the meets they attended. Many individuals made outstanding achievements during the season.

Lorraine Persyn qualified for the state meet in the high jump event, with a leap of 5'6". That effort tied the city record. Lorraine also had three first place awards in other meets. Shauna Pratt took second place in the long jump, with a 17'6" leap. Taking third in district, Lynn Chambers, Cindy Glass, Carolyn Loper, and Shauna Pratt participated in the 440 relay. Wendy Phelps took second in district in the shot put event with a throw of 39'2 $\frac{3}{4}$ ". Cindy Elliott took second place in district with her efforts in the mile. All of the individual participants made superior efforts and contributed to a super season.

Success Repeats

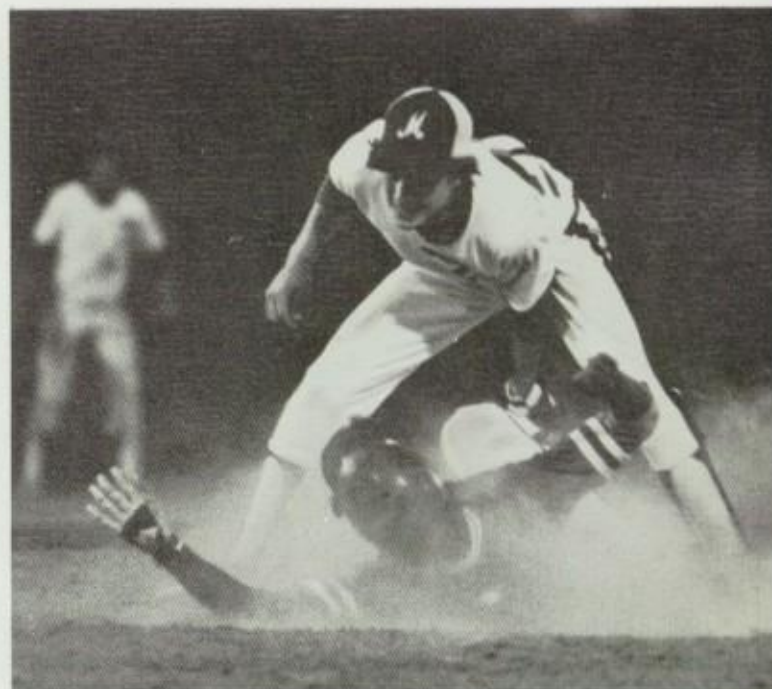

The MHS baseball players had a tremendously successful season, as they did last year. It looked as though they would go as far or farther in playoffs than the 1977 team. Though they only advanced to the bi-district series, they showed great power and talent. During the first half of the district season, the Rams were undefeated and averaged five runs per game. Their opponents were held to an average of three runs per game. A crucial point in first round play was the Jay game, which determined the championship of the first half.

Del Rio took the second round of district play. The Rams of MHS and the Rams of Del Rio then took to the field to decide the district title. Marshall took the first two games of the two out of three series. The Rams then advanced to bi-district, pitted against South San.

Steve Tietze slides into third as an offender reaches to tag him.

In 1977, the South San Bobcats had not been beaten on their own field in five years. But the Rams broke that record. So it was no surprise when the Rams took the first game of the three game series by beating South San at the South San campus field. The second game was played at Inselman field. The Rams lost that contest 3-6. Then it was back to South San's home field for the third and decisive game. The game was threatened by rain and momentarily, by dimming lights, but the game was completed with South San on top, 2-0.

Individuals, Desire Equal Success

Success. For the Rams, it came from individuals and desire, according to Coach Denny Ivey. The desire of the Ram team to reach the playoffs after losing seven starting players from the 1977 season was great. The team was loyally supported by all of the Ram fans. And the talent and success of the individuals contributed to the power of the team. The district 30-AAAA all-district players from the Ram team were Rick Eades—outfielder, Mike Hatch—first base, Jay Moose—pitcher, Don Sicko—designated hitter, Loren Stone—shortstop, and Steve Tietze—outfielder. Steve Tietze also made the all-city team as an outfielder. The city coaches voted on the team and Steve was one of three players to be voted to the team unanimously.

SPLASH!

The Marshall swimmers and divers made quite a splash last year. The teams practiced first at the Northeast swimming complex and later at the newly built Northside swimming complex. The swimmers and divers competed in the same meets, which were usually dual meets against other schools in the Marshall region. The swim coach, George Block commented on some of the team members. "Lenore Jackson was the star of the team. She was a state, regional, and national junior qualifier. Kim Hull was also a super talent and a hard worker. She reached the state finals in the sprints. Jeff Frey was our leading boy. He reached the finals in regionals. Dru Johnson did well in the backstroke and was an All-American water polo player. Also, one of our divers, Doug Bradway, coached by Sheryl Reihman, took seventh place in regionals." Due to the diligence and daily practice of the aquatic members, the Marshall teams really made waves!

Size Promotes Stricter Rules

Marshall students, especially seniors, were flustered this year by the elimination of many traditions. Among these were assemblies, Christmas decorations, posters, and possibly an outside graduation. All of these problems have materialized from a common source—the increased size of the student body.

The 1976-1977 school year brought about the decision by the administration to abolish most assemblies. In previous years, assemblies were the primary money-making projects of clubs and classes. The shows promoted spirit around the school as well as provided a break from the routine schedules. This year assemblies were impossible, because five shows would have to be performed to include the 3,500 plus students at Marshall.

Other eliminations placed on the student body were Christmas decorations and posters. Traditionally, Marshall students had always decorated the hall with posters, balloons, and streamers on occasions such as football games, elections, and contests. The first week of school, however, the Ram fans were informed by the administration of the brand new bulletin boards placed around the school. The students did not feel that their posters were ruining the school but, nevertheless, obeyed the rules. The climax came when the teachers received an announcement that there were to be no Christmas decorations. The students exploded at the sudden announcement. A few teachers allowed a small Christmas tree in the room and a snowman here and there.

When the announcement came about the indoor graduation, many seniors were alarmed mainly because of the restriction on the number of guests each student could invite. The school board and administration were not aware of the disturbance until the senior meeting. Mr. Ed Cody came and spoke to the students about an indoor graduation. He was confronted with many disappointed seniors. The seniors wanted the traditional graduation with the Ram band playing the music. Later, the seniors were allowed to vote on where they wanted to have graduation. The class of '78 voted 600 to 30 to have graduation at Northside Stadium on the football field. At last, a spark of tradition!

The large enrollment was never more evident than during passing periods.

This year, thirty million dollars will be spent to provide students with an education. Most of the budget goes for teachers' salaries, but the money provides for numerous other projects. The school board is the body which produces these projects. Presently, Thomas Clark High School is under construction and will be completed by August of 1978. On February 15, Mr. Ed Cody, Superintendent, opened the Northside Swimming Pool facilities. In addition, several elementary schools are being built such as Timber Ridge Elementary. The Northside is rapidly becoming the largest school district in San Antonio and certainly the best.

marshall sweeps at meets

John Marshall participated in several UIL (University Interscholastic League) meets this year, and they were outstanding representatives in each of their respective events.

On January 28, the UIL team travelled to Andrews, Texas. Thirty-nine schools throughout the state participated in the meet. Marshall took a first place mathematics team trophy and a first place number sense team trophy. The team also placed third in the science division.

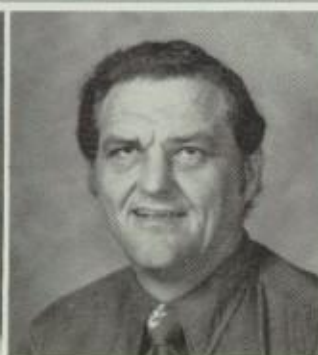

On February 18, the Marshall math and science UIL team participated in the Lanier Math and Science Tournament. First place winners were Pam Mason, Paul Doucette, Joe Warren, and Robin Abraham. Second place winners included: Jim Hall, Joe Warren, Paul Doucette, and Jimmy Adair. Other placers were: Ari Siegal, Rick Nichols, Thomas Woller, Pat Campbell, Larry Ketchersid, Steve Lovelace, Jerome De La Cruz, Julie Garrett, Stephen Gonzales, Jack Hase, and Nancy Hsu.

At Judson High School UIL practice meet, John Marshall won a second place sweepstakes trophy. Students who contributed to the win were Steve Lovelace, Daryl Grove, Paul Doucette, Robin Abraham, Pat Campbell, Joe Warren, Sylvia Martinez, Mike Lebman, Frank Garcia, Julia Baxter, Donna King, Kathy Mason, Lee Matecko, and Glen Sensiba.

On March 11, Marshall won a first place sweepstakes trophy at Roosevelt. The winners were Steve Lovelace, Daryl Grove, Robin Abraham, Pam Mason, Mike Sands, Lisa Black, Pat Faherty, Jim Hall, Jerome De La Cruz, and Joe Warren.

Students Advance to State Meets

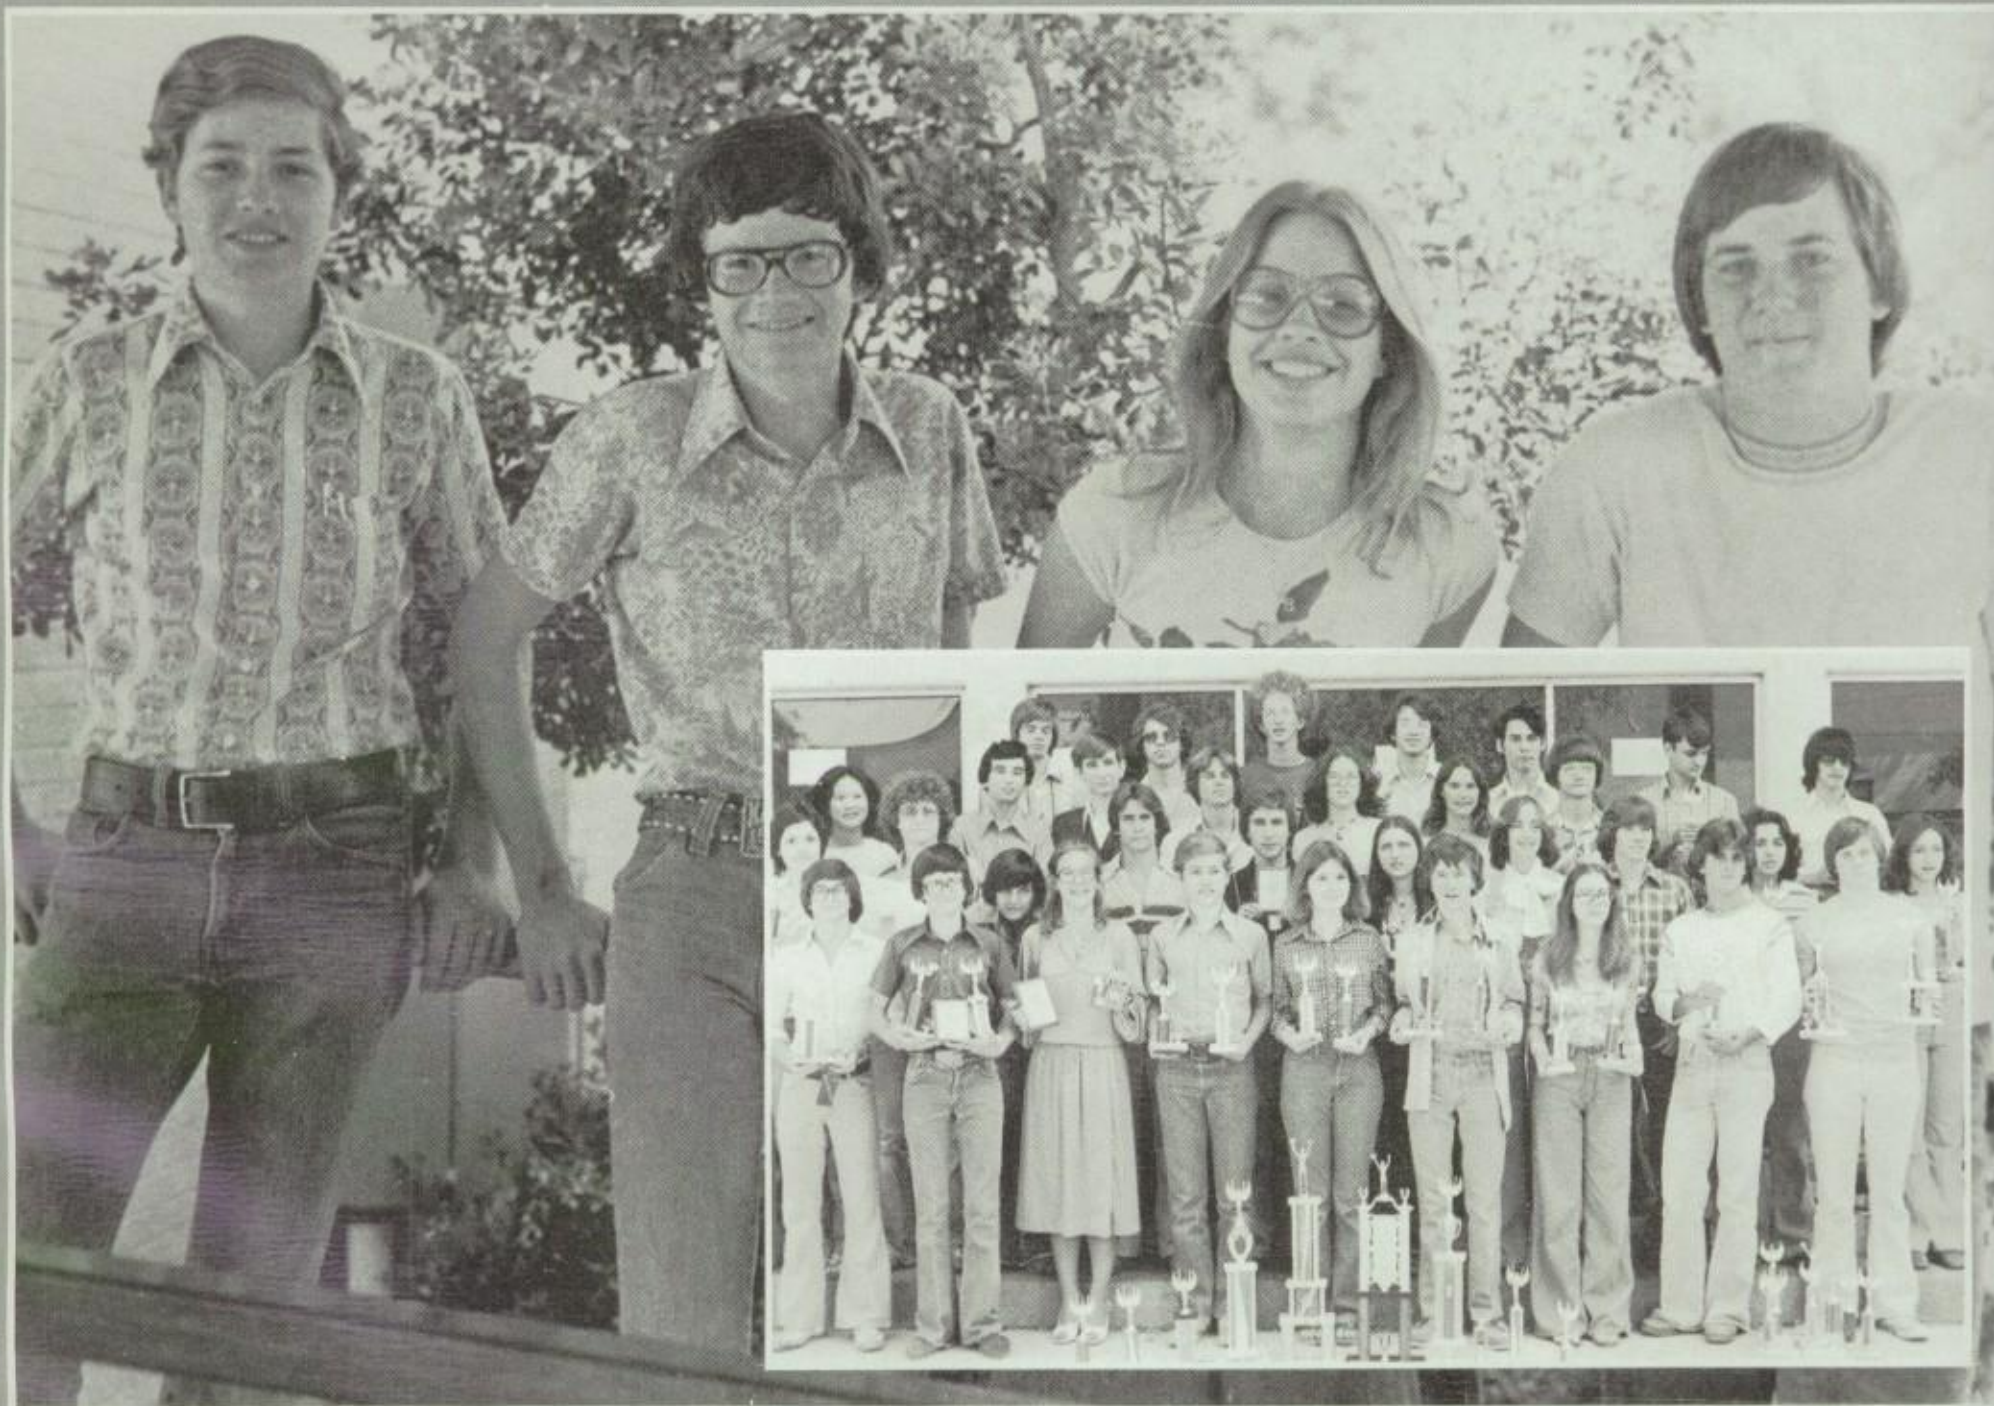

Although students performed to their utmost abilities for the practice meets, the focal point of their achievements was the state meet in Austin. The Marshall UILers displayed the expertise they had achieved by easily sweeping the district title. At the UIL literary meet held April 15 at Holmes High School, the team clinched a grand total of 174 points to capture the sweepstakes title. Among the members to receive first place awards were Mike Lebman, Frank Garcia, Pat Faherty, Steve Lovelace, and Joe Warren. Second place winners were Byron Freemyer, Lisa Black, Heidi Reinberg, Julia Ronnfeldt, Daryl Grove, Paul Doucette, Jim Hall, and Glen Sensiba. In addition, Paul Miethker and Linda Garcia won third place awards. Phill George received an honorarium for his prose reading.

These students journeyed to Del Mar College in Corpus Christi to compete in the regional competition where four Marshall students, Daryl Grove, Steve Lovelace, Lisa Black, and Paul Doucette placed high enough to go on to State. At the state meet in Austin, Lisa Black emerged as a third place winner in editorial writing.

The state qualifiers are as follows Daryl Groves, Steve Lovelace, Lisa Black, and Paul Doucette. Inset. The following students won awards at UIL practice meets

Teacher Interest Extend Beyond the Classroom

John Marshall's faculty have extended their relationships beyond the classrooms. In an effort to coordinate activities among the 165 members of the faculty, the M.I.T. (Marshall Intervention Team) spearheaded various activities such as a Christmas dance, and a family picnic at Canyon Lake. The M.I.T. also served as a liason between Marshall and the other two high schools in the Northside district. The committees have directed attention toward absenteeism in the district. In addition, the M.I.T. set up a project to reshelve and rearrange the Marshall library. Each department volunteered one afternoon towards this effort. Faculty members also participated in a bowling league. Many friendships have emerged through outside activities, thereby, creating a better working relationship.

Ag. STUDENTS FUTURE PRODUCERS

John Marshall High School offers the best agricultural training in San Antonio. Many of the courses offered are unique to the Northside district. The department offers a four year program, and students may take a cooperative course their junior and senior year. In the agriculture courses, students progress in managerial and manipulative skills needed for individuals to become established in farming, ranching, or other agricultural occupations.

In the cooperative agriculture, students receive on-the-job training. These students work in areas of plant science, animal science, soil science, farm management, and agricultural mechanization. One class period is devoted to studying a particular job. The students take two periods to work at an afternoon job.

STUDENTS DEVELOP GREEN THUMBS

Marshall offers a unique group of courses not found in many other schools. Horticulture introduces students to the plant industry. Students spend a total of two hours each day in the classroom and laboratory. Students learn about the reproduction and growth of plants, principles of plant breeding and propagation, and greenhouse operation and management.

To further the individual's study of areas of plant farming, the horticulture department offers pre-employment laboratories. In the farm power courses, students concentrate on the agricultural mechanization. They learn about planting, cultivating, spraying, and fertilizing machines.

The business department offers students the opportunity to develop not only business skills but also a business background. Marshall offers courses such as typewriting, business mathematics, business law, shorthand, accounting, and notetaking.

In typing, students learn to arrange and type business letters, reports, tables, invoices, and office memos.

Business mathematics and business law give a knowledge of mathematics and law as they apply to the business world.

Shorthand is mainly for students wishing to major in business. Notetaking is a similar version of shorthand which is mainly for college bound students.

Accounting is a recommended course for any student interested in accounting as a career. The accountants maintain business records for corporations as well as self-employed persons.

Avenues Open Through Language studies

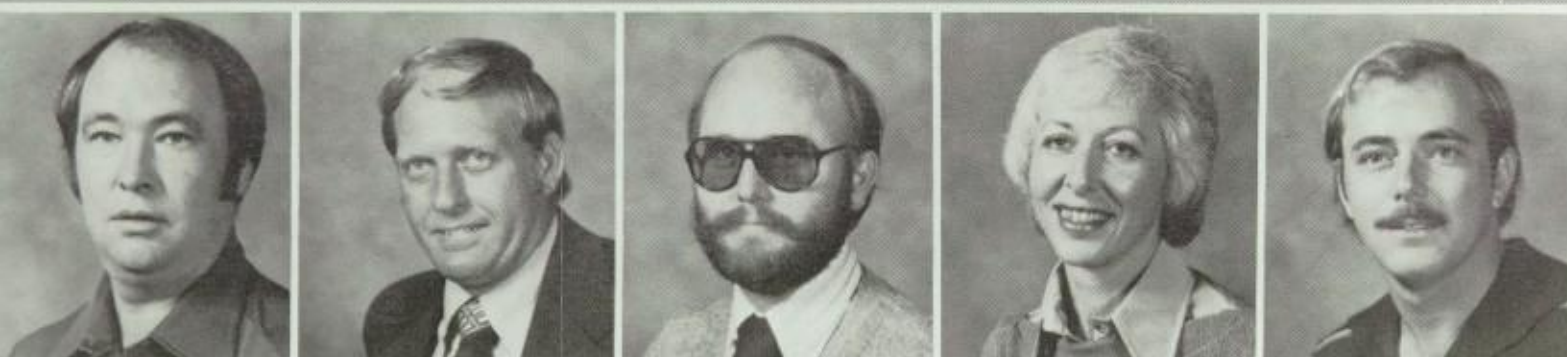

The one subject area which is deeply associated with all other areas of education is the field of language arts. No matter what career a student pursues, he is required to communicate certain ideas.

Marshall requires students to take English I, II, and III. College bound seniors are advised to either take English IV Advanced Composition/Creative Writing or English IV Skills. Other elective courses are introduction to the humanities, speech, speech debate, journalism, newspaper, and yearbook.

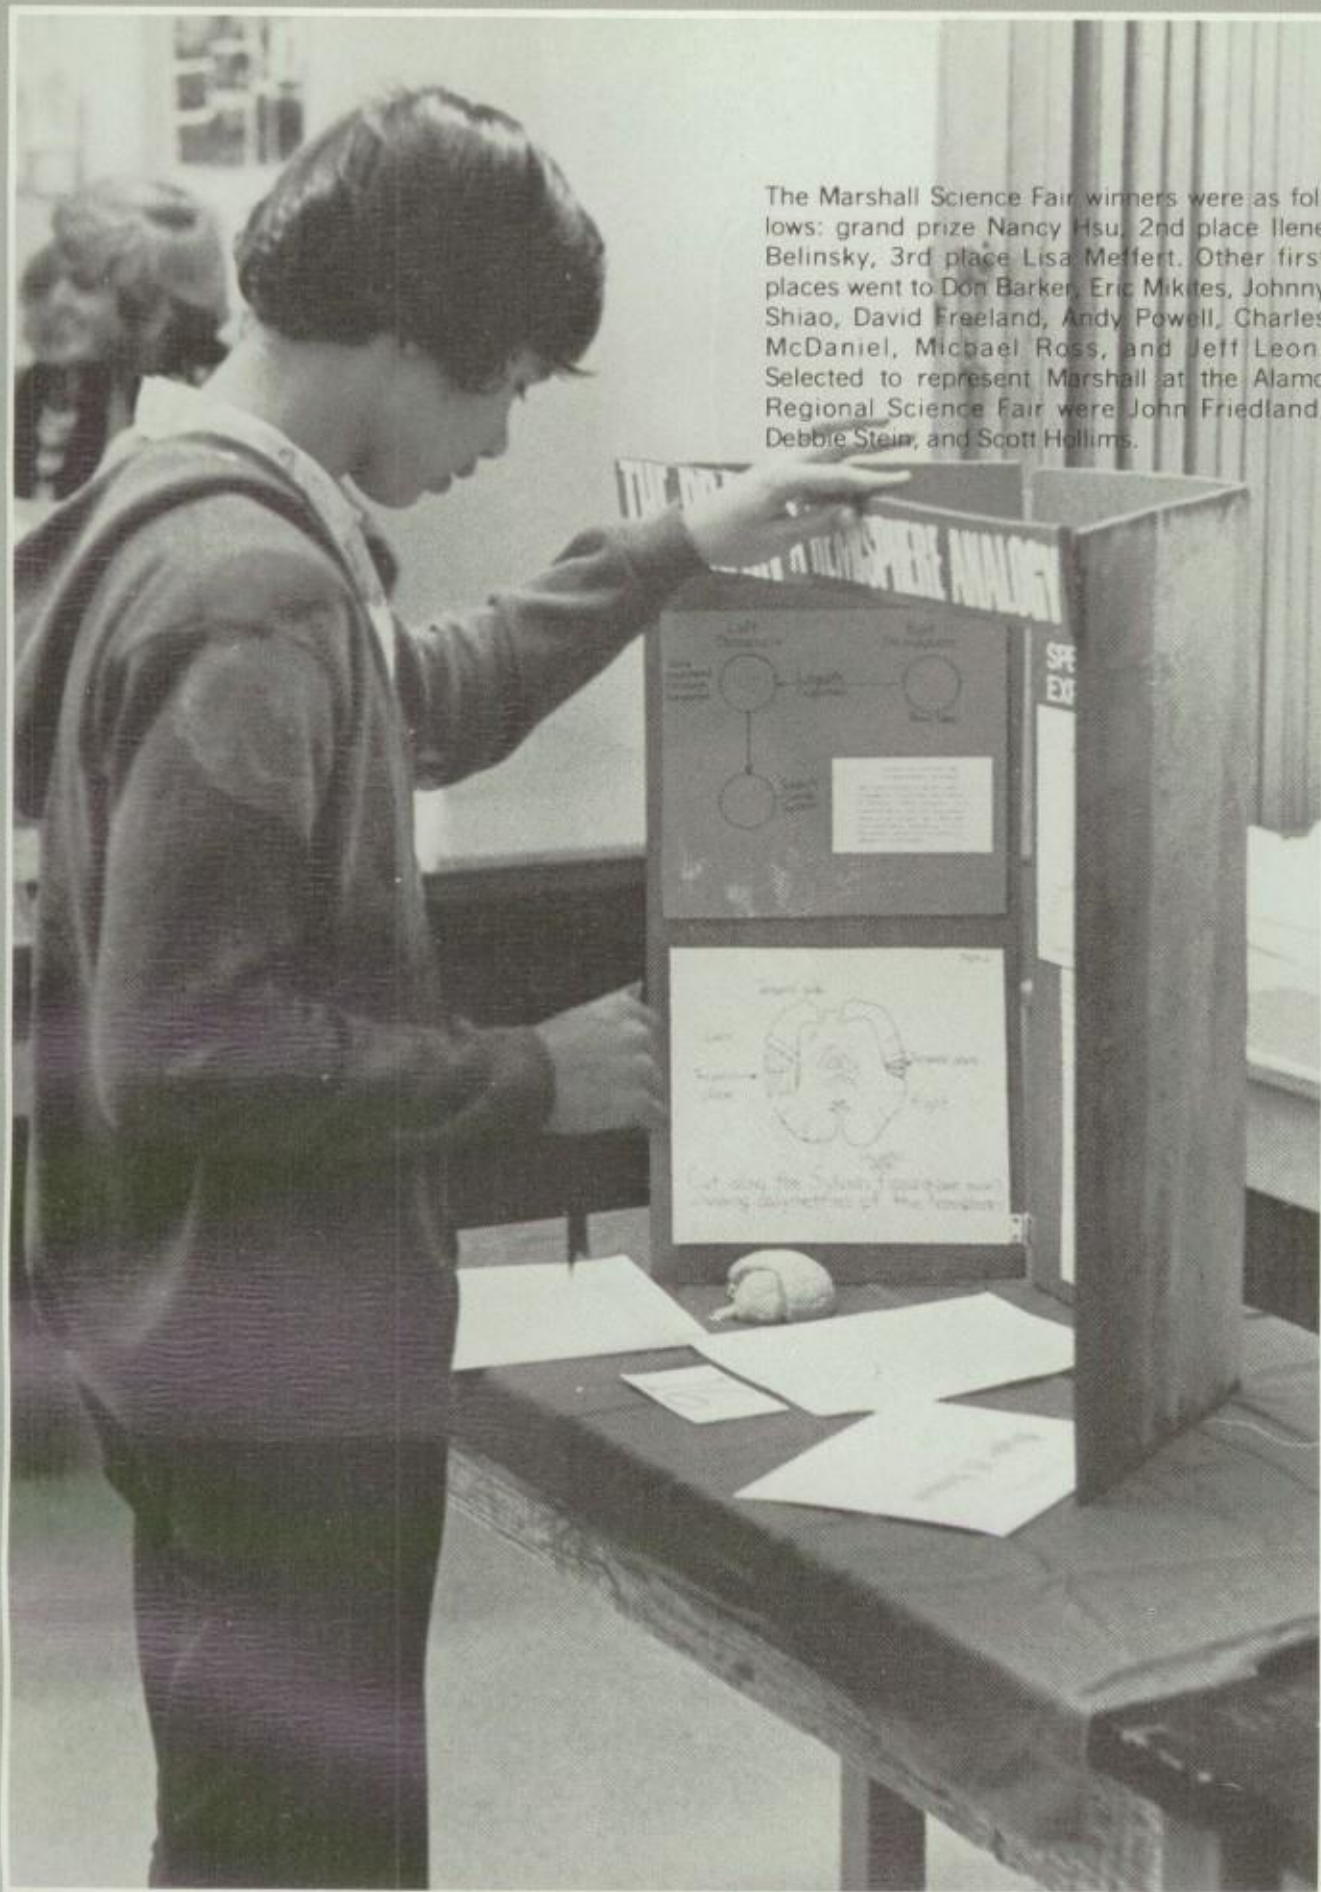

Speech students learn to adjust to speaking situations. The advanced course prepares students for persuasive speaking. Debate classes teach students to acquire leadership in their speaking.

Journalism I explores areas such as basic features of journalism, reporting, headline writing, and caption writing. The Journalism II course is a laboratory course. Newspaper production is involved in the Journalism II course. The other Journalism II course involves the production of the school yearbook using areas of format, organization, and preparation of copy.

Science Curriculum Encompasses All Students

A basic plan was explained by Mr. Walter Potter, department chairman, on the three groups of students encompassed by the science curriculum. These three types of students include the scientifically oriented, the liberal arts minded, and the non-college bound student. All three groups are encouraged to take the foundation courses which are Biology I, Chemistry I, and Physics I. Other courses offered by the department are Biology II, Chemistry II, Physics II, physical science, geology/atmospheric, anatomy/physiology, marine/environmental, and aviation/aerospace. Among the teachers in the science program, fifty percent have advanced degrees. All the science courses at Marshall are a lab oriented curriculum, with a minimum of twenty percent of the year spent on student labs.

The Marshall science program has aided several students in winning numerous awards. Every year, Marshall sends students with outstanding projects to the Alamo Regional Science Fair, the Junior Academy of Science, and the Science Symposium at the University of Texas at Austin. The students who represent Marshall at these contests usually come back with the top awards indicating the quality of the science program at Marshall.

FOREIGN TASTES

The study of all languages is important and helpful. All colleges highly recommend high school students to take a foreign language. Students are introduced both to new dialects and to new and exciting cultures. In all languages, the primary year is spent in learning the conversational language and the second year learning the grammar. Subsequent years are spent learning more detailed information.

The study of spanish is obviously of major interest, because for most Marshall students it could hardly be deemed a "foreign" language. It is necessary for students living on the border of another country to understand its people, its literature, and its language.

Often called the language of romance, French is a popular and enjoyable course at Marshall. Students often have trouble learning new and demanding pronunciations, but are instilled with the pulchritude of this language.

German students are of the highest quality as the dialect is difficult to learn. Through insightful and skilled teaching, the language seems to infect the student with the desire to delve deeper and learn more. It requires, as do all languages, a great deal of dedication by all.

The final language is Latin, which is the basis for many languages today. Latin strengthens the students vocabulary and grammar skills in seemingly all other languages. The history and the culture of the Romans is also dealt with simply and sympathetically.

A student's education is greatly enhanced by his participation in any of these languages; and his appreciation of his own culture, as well as others, is deeply broadened.

All homemaking courses are open to both boys and girls. The usual series courses Homemaking I, II, and III are offered, but other home related courses are available. Home and family living is designed to help young people understand themselves, and develop a sense of community responsibility. The course also includes a mock marriage in which the students participate and plan themselves. Home nursing is a study of human development from conception to early infancy with emphasis on physical care. Consumer education is designed to help the student develop consumer skills with emphasis on how the consumer can get the greatest value for money spent. Housing and interior design involves a study of types of housing, selection of furnishings and management and consumer aspects of selection of a home and its furnishings. Child development is a study of the growth and development process from conception to school age. Singles living covers all areas of everyday living and home life. Students learn the basic fundamentals in efficiently maintaining a home while performing a job. Home management is a course which emphasizes the fundamental aspects of management as they apply to basic living skills.

Several organizations extend from home economics. FHA or the Future Homemakers of America is the vocational homemaking organization. HERO/FHA is especially organized for students involved in one of the "speciality" courses such as PEL, HECE, and VEH. YHT or Young Homemakers of Texas is an organization formed exclusively for educational purposes.

It's as easy as pi.

Mathematics courses enable students to achieve an understanding of principles and concepts. John Marshall High School offers a wide range of courses for the different levels of comprehension exhibited by students.

Fundamental courses in math enable students to grasp a healthier background in that area. Following the fundamental math courses are algebra I and II, and geometry. Algebra and geometry provide a foundation for the higher mathematics. They are essential courses for students planning on entering college. Later elective courses are trigonometry, analytic geometry, elementary analysis, calculus, consumer economics, and computer mathematics.

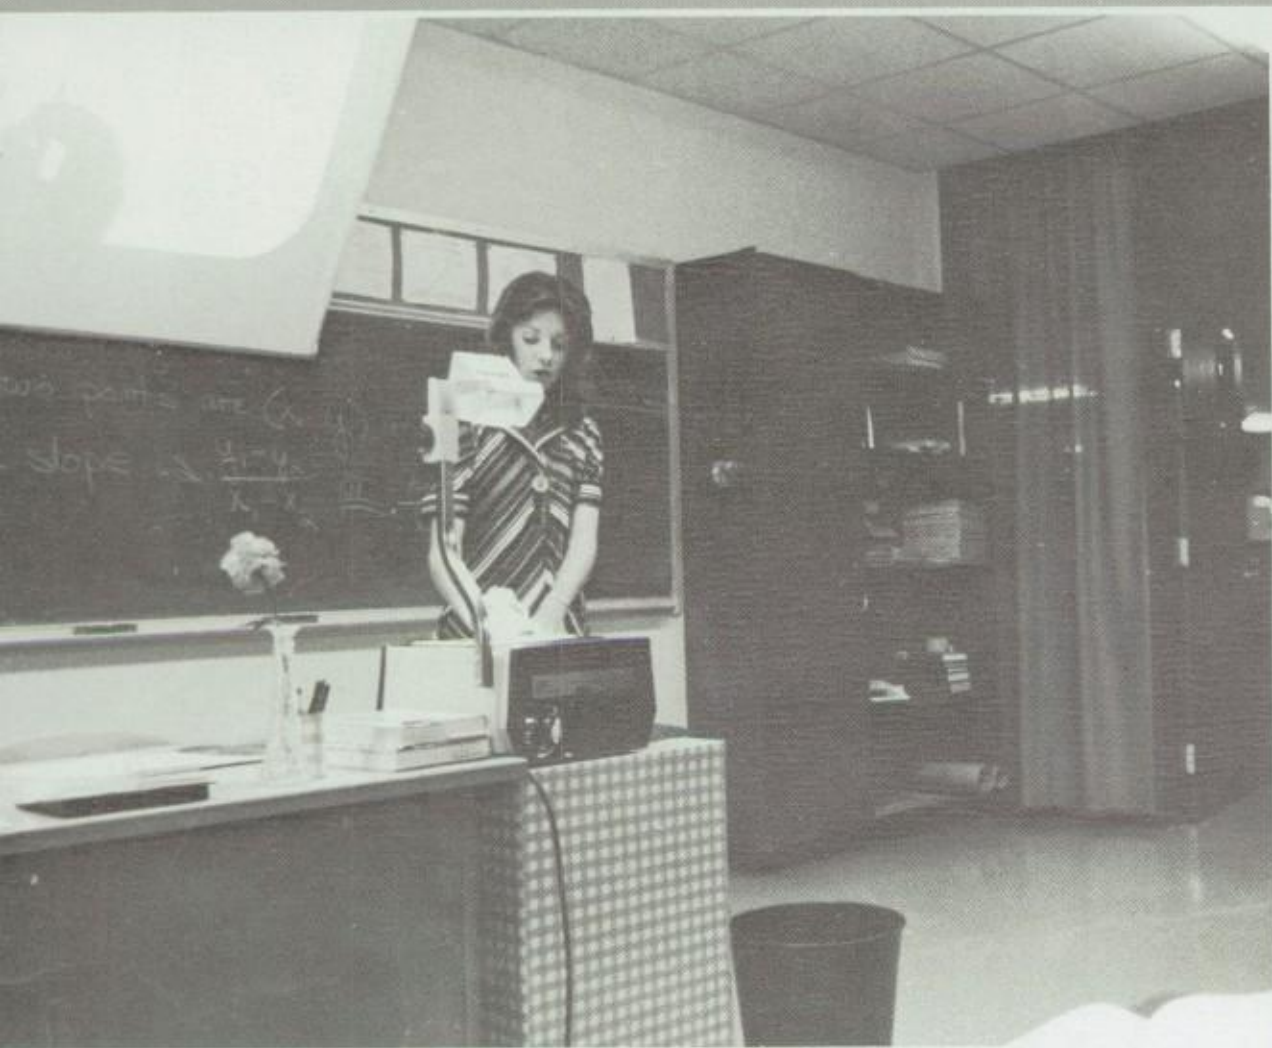

Students who are high achievers in mathematics entered contests. This year Marshall placed first in state by grabbing six first places in six areas. In number sense, Paul Doucette won the veteran category while Jerome de la Cruz captured the freshman section. In the mathematics division, the winners were Jerome de la Cruz, freshman; Pam Mason, sophomore; Joe Warren, junior; and Paul Doucette, senior.

Music programs develop standards that instill lasting appreciation and understanding of music. Through music education, students learn skills and understandings which make them desirable members of the community.

The most popular music course is the marching band. The 200 member Ram band has been an extraordinary group at Marshall. Their precision in marching and quality of music has won them numerous blue ribbons in the past two years. After football season, the marching band separates into symphonic bands. They perform in concerts, UIL, music competitions, and other music activities throughout the year.

Various courses in choir further develop skills in vocal production and music reading. The courses are concert choir, mixed choir, treble choir, and tenor bass choir.

Music theory classes give an introduction into choral structures, melodic structure, harmony, ear training, arranging and analysis.

Phil George, Desiree Robinson, Chuck Upshaw, and Rita Minjarez experiment with notes on an electric piano.

Students Shape Up

Physical and health education help to develop individuals physically and mentally.

Physical education provides a variety of games and activities to increase strength and efficiency of the body. Students practice good sportsmanship and physical fitness in the daily classes. Athletics and pep squad are also a part of the physical education program.

The main goals of the health program are to provide proper attitudes and practices that will contribute to personal and community health. The areas of study are: personality, mental and physical health, effects of drugs, human sexuality, first aid, and prevention and treatment of diseases and accidents. Each student at John Marshall is required to take health education.

Marshall's art department provides students with a chance to develop creative potential through a sequential program. The student beginning in Art I will study art from prehistoric and ancient times, up to the contemporary art forms, working with design and different media and techniques. With this broad background, the student advancing to Art II will study the history of American art and begin to experiment with the art styles and media of American artists. The various media used range from acrylic painting and pencil drawing to pen and ink and clay sculpture. In Art III and IV, the curriculum concentrates mainly on contemporary art forms. The student studies various styles and techniques such as realism in the form of "traditional" photorealistic and object-as-object painting. By understanding each of these techniques, the student can better evaluate his own work and style. The student will also be exposed to Conceptual Art and Primitivism, making such projects as "an event" and "assemblage".

A Knowledge of Design

The art department also provides instruction in crafts. The student creates two and three dimensional projects which develop skill with his hands as well as a knowledge of design elements such as color, line, texture, shape, form, and mass. Some of the projects include batik, papier mache pop art, ceramics, and weaving.

Another art form, photography, is also offered at Marshall. In this study of photography, the student learns to view photography as an art form rather than just a snapshot documentation. The course involves a study of the camera anatomy from the most primitive devices to today's sophisticated equipment and the uses of each. A history of famous photographers and their styles is also studied. The student learns to interpret the styles and methods of other photographers in order to develop a style of his own. After instruction on darkroom techniques, the student completes projects using many techniques such as photograms, solarization, posterization, photo-collage, and photo-silkscreens.

A familiarity of social studies can enable students to understand the past and apply it to the present. The knowledge of one's own country along with that of other countries helps him to relate to his own culture and the world.

The social studies department at Marshall covers a wide spectrum of subjects. Three of these subjects are required for graduation. They are American History, World History, and American Government. These courses are the basis for all other courses.

Upper level courses are offered to students who have excelled in the fundamental social science courses and wish to expand their realm of knowledge. They include International Relation Studies, European Studies, Economics, Psychology, Anthropology, Sociology, and Philosophy.

In addition to classroom activities, trips to Europe and the east coast are offered to students in the spring and summer of each year.

A Paycheck Education

Vocational education offers students the opportunity to learn a life long skill. It offers students a chance to prepare themselves for a more in-depth study in college, or a post-graduation job.

Vocational courses consist of distributive Education, Health Occupations, and Office Education Cooperative Training.

Distributive Education is a two year program in the field of marketing and distribution. Distributive occupations are found in service establishments, retailing, and wholesaling. The students receive training through on-the-job experiences and classroom activities.

Health Occupations Education provides training in a health career field. The students work at least three hours each school day in various health fields.

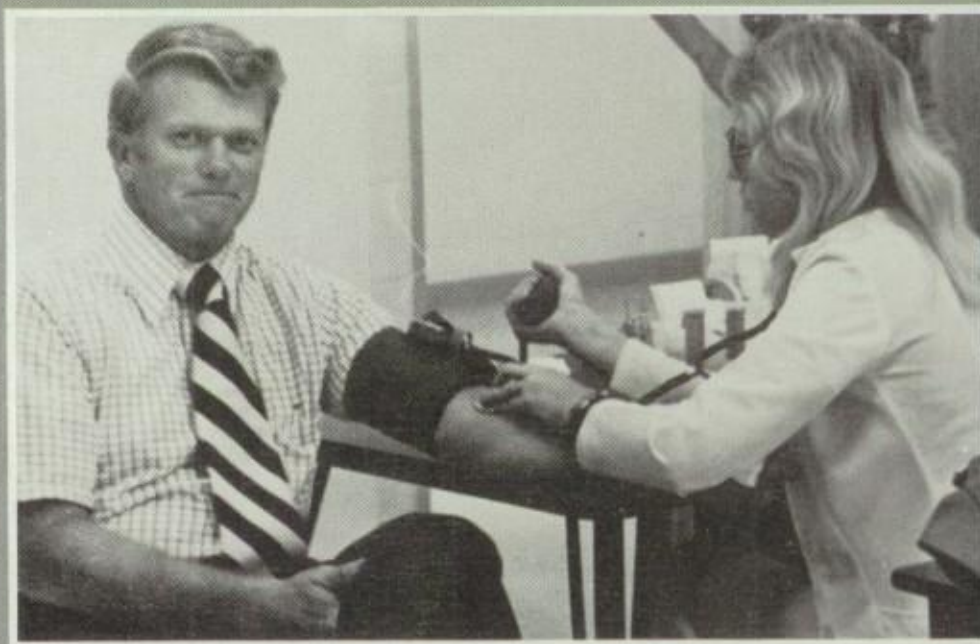

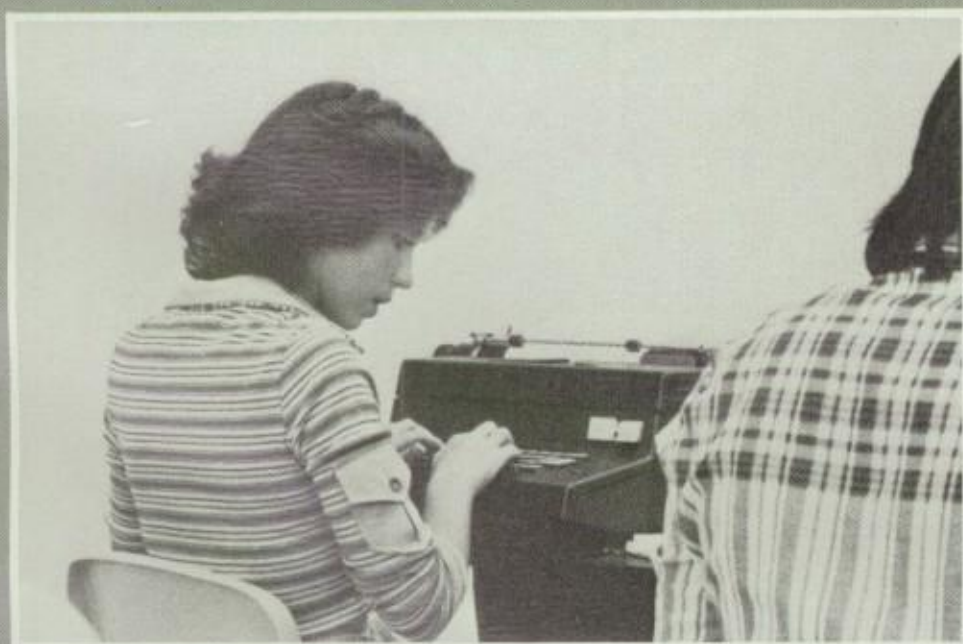

The Vocational Office Education program meets the needs of students who have specific career objectives in office occupations. The program is a course for seniors. The pupils receive technical and related instruction in a class each day in addition to on the job training. The Office Education Pre-Employment Laboratory is designed for students who wish to enter employment in an office occupation.

FUTURE TRADES

Industrial Arts is designed to prepare youths for the industrial society. Students work with common tools and materials, and they develop skills and pride in craftsmanship.

Marshall provides such courses as General Drafting, Architectural Drafting I and II, General Metalworking I and II, General Woodworking, and Machine Woodworking.

The Drafting courses teach the students to use drafting instruments and associated materials and equipment. The courses provide pupils with useful information in home planning, home design, and home ownership. The advanced architectural drafting course requires a knowledge of algebra and trigonometry.

Metalworking courses involve in-depth studies of the technology. Students learn to work metal formers, milling machines, and lathes. In the advanced course, students use machines rather than hand tools.

Woodworking courses teach the fundamental principles of simple wood construction which are the planning, drawing, constructing, and finishing. The advanced course involves the use of machines in application of skills learned in general woodworking.

Campus Suspension

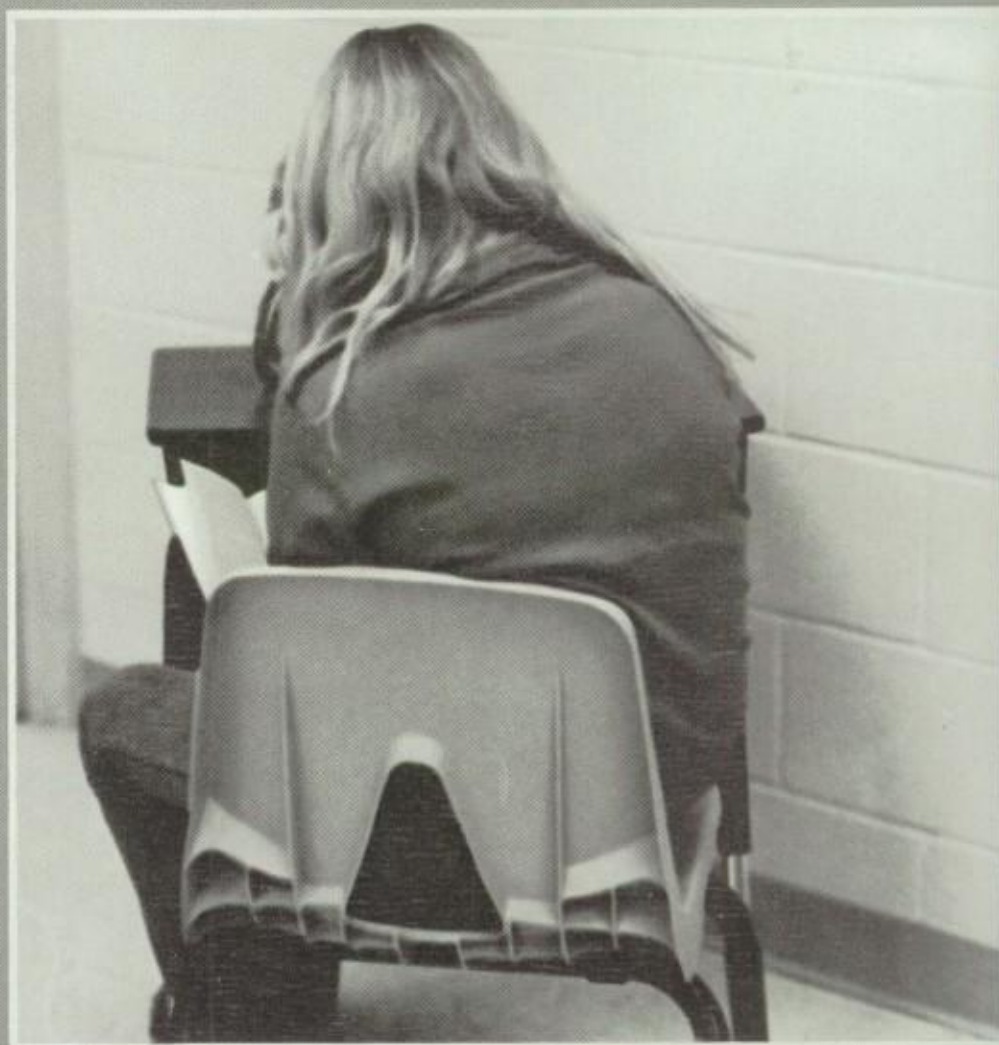

In October of 1977, the John Marshall administration instituted an additional means of disciplinary action. On Campus suspension applies to students who are truant or who skip detention hall.

Students report to a room in the vocational building at 8:30 a.m.. The desks are arranged facing the wall. At 11 a.m., the director takes the students to the cafeteria where they have a 25 minute silent lunch period. Following lunch, the students return to the room and remain there until 3:30.

The administration is very pleased with the program because the students do not receive zeros for the assignments they missed. The program punishes the student without punishing his grades.

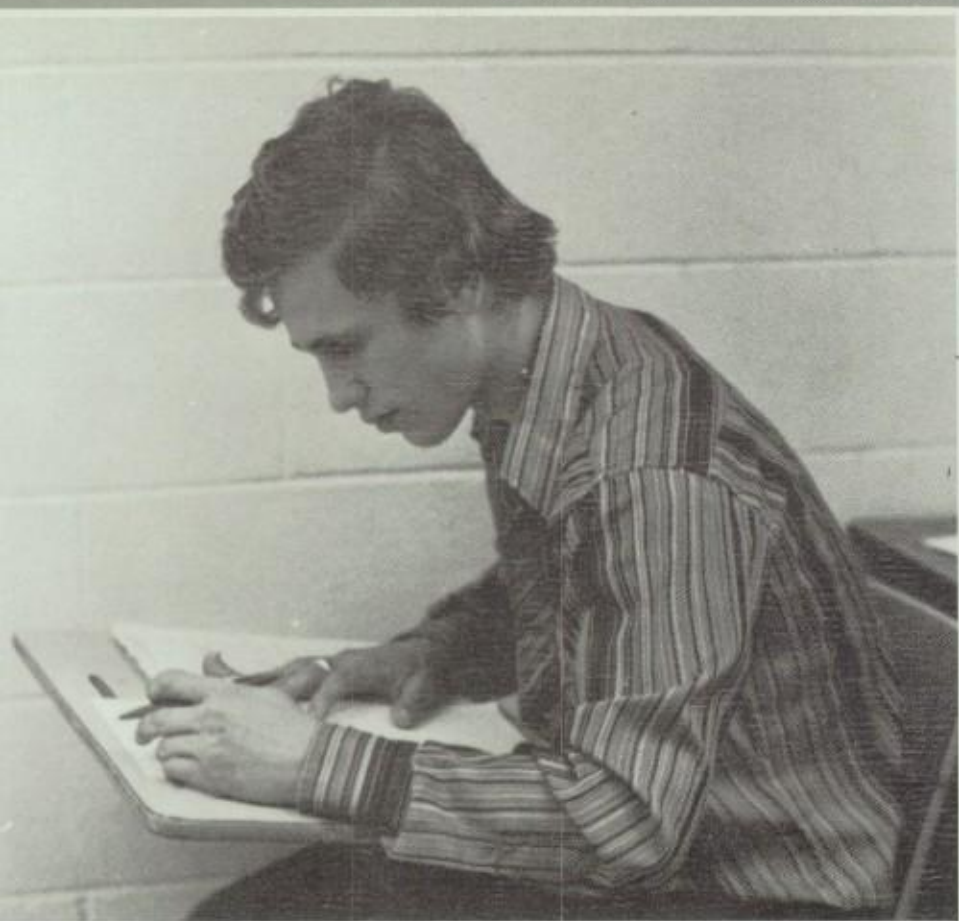

On the blackboard are rules for on campus suspension.

Exemption or Exam?

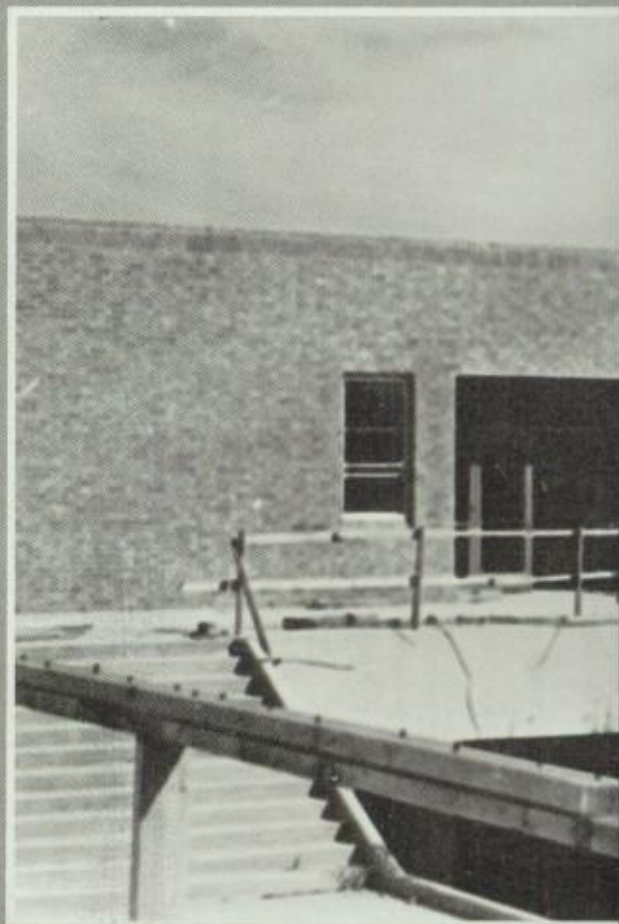

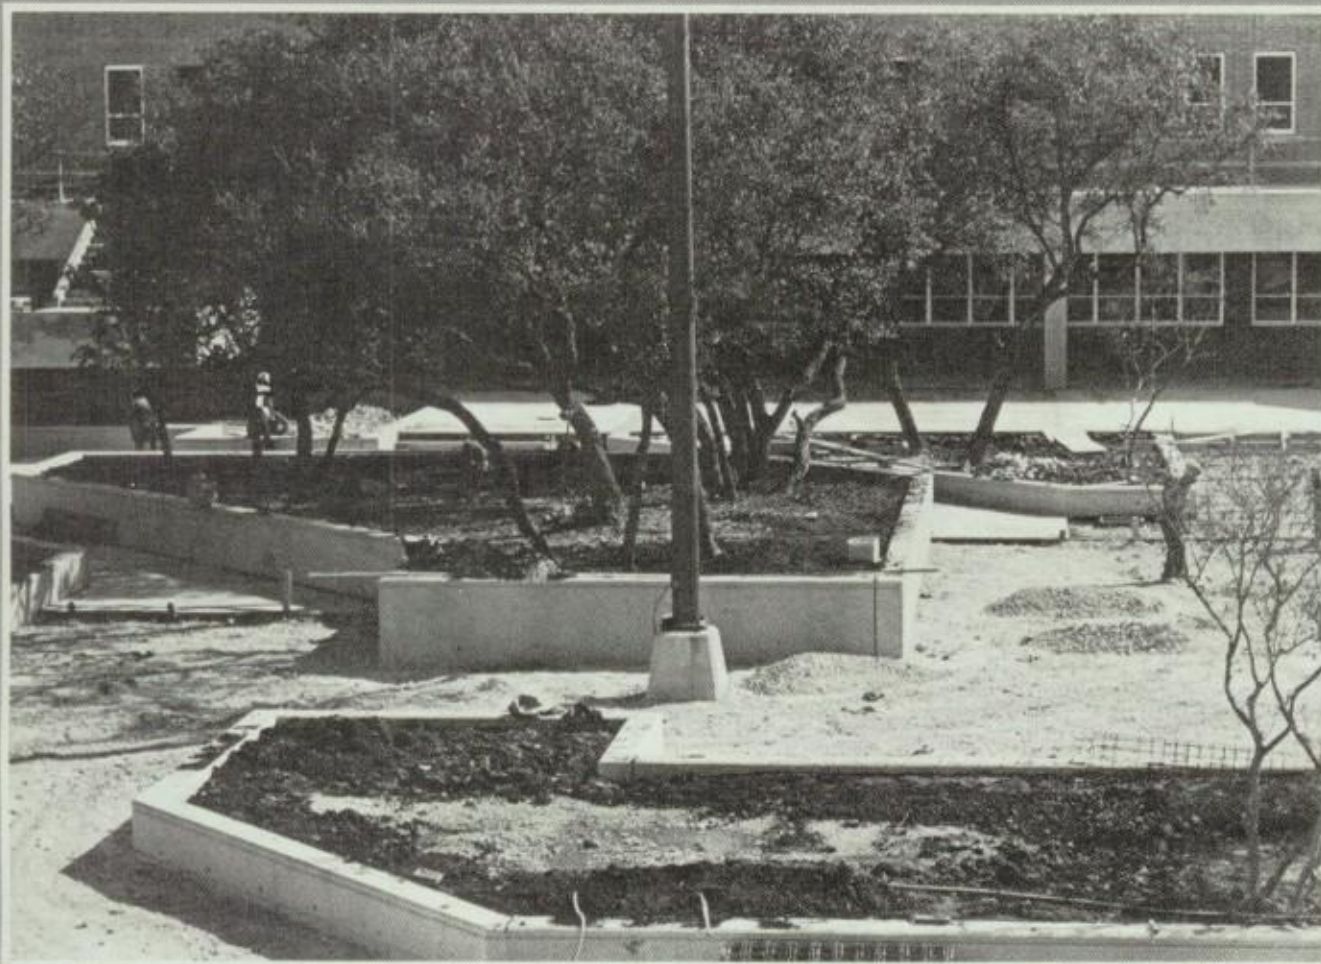

The final days of the six weeks period, some students frantically prepared for their tests while others took the exams light heartedly. The testing period usually lasted for three days, with two one and one-half hour tests each day. The final day of exams, students promised themselves to try harder for an exemption next quarter.

But those who were victims of their absences and low grades faced a quarter exam. The exams played a major role in the students report card. They counted one-third of the quarter grade, and a low grade could make or break a student's average.

Danny Spaeth takes a quarter exam in a history class, while Patty Walsh enjoys an exemption.

Clark Sparks

In September of 1978 the Northside Independent School will add a brand new school to their list to make a fourth outstanding high school.

The preparations for the opening of Thomas C. Clark High School affected John Marshall this year. Double elections and tryouts had to be held for pep squad, band, and other organizations. With the absence of a senior class, juniors at Clark will hold elective positions normally reserved for seniors.

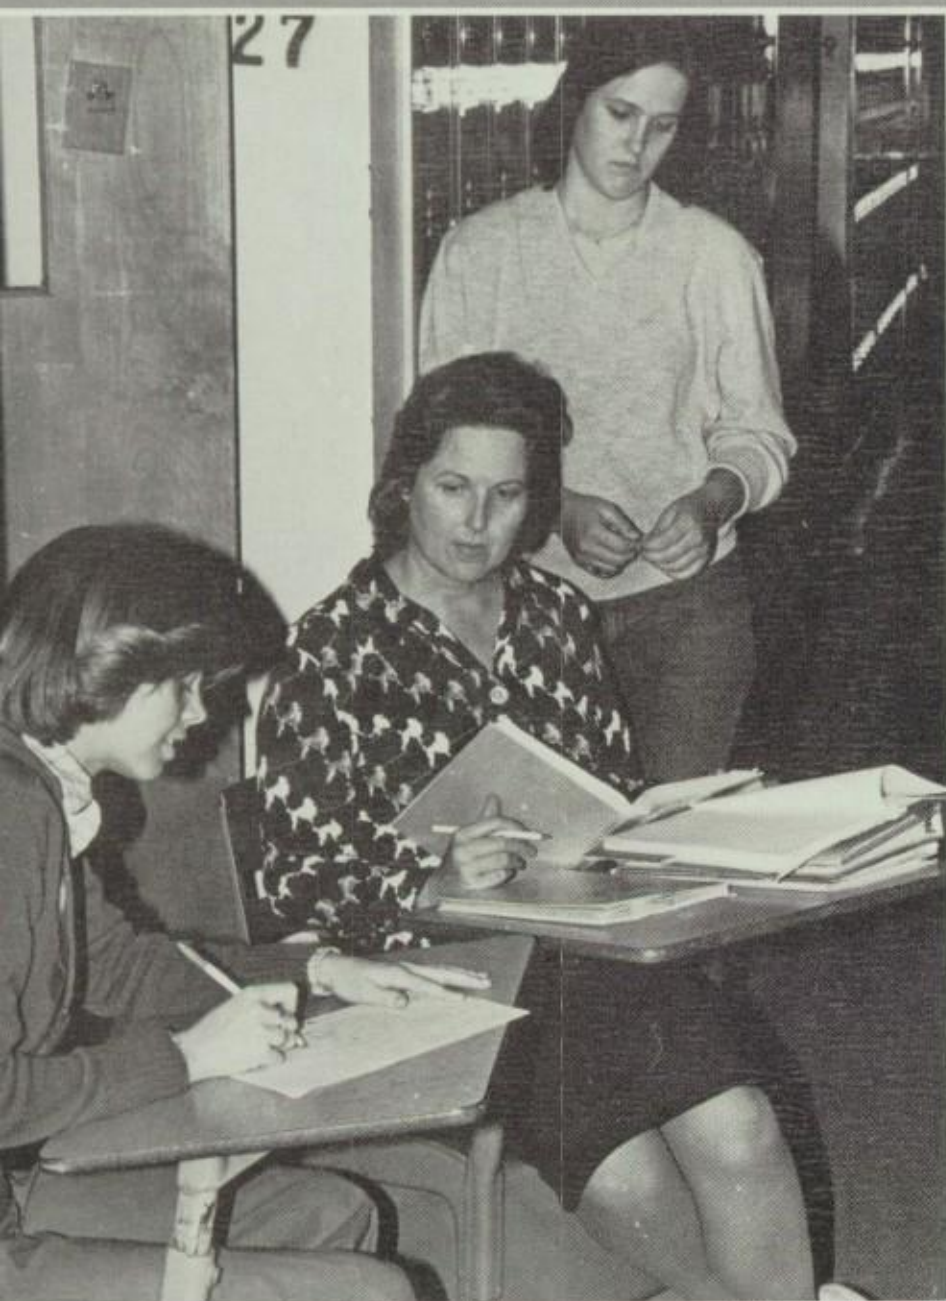

Mr. Jerry Daniel, who opened his temporary office on our campus, named 32 Marshall teachers to transfer to the Clark campus. The remaining faculty members were named from other schools in the district.

Hobby Middle School eighth graders and Marshall freshmen and sophomores selected The Cougar as the mascot and black, white, and silver as the school colors.

The Beginning of the End

Seniors get excited! Seniors cheering and screaming at athletic events was quite a common sight. During the first three years at Marshall, the class of 1978 was not one of the more spirited classes. But the mighty seniors more than compensated for their losses by displaying their exuberance, backing all Ram endeavors, and promoting spirit and enthusiasm. Upperclassmen arrived at the second pep rally clad in flannel shirts and a variety of hats to prove their loyalty. From this point on, MHS realized the presence of the '78 graduates. Seniors continued their dynamic drive of spirit by winning seven of the ten spirit sticks at the Ram pep rallies. Car caravans, streamers, noisemakers, and posters occupied the seniors' time the day of the games. Spirit, battlecries, chants, and cheers were abundant. Yes, the seniors of '78 arrived!!!

Juniors in General

For many, the third year in high school reflected a change. It was their first year as upperclassmen. Juniors soon began seeking revenge for past grievances and torturing freshman minds with the reliable "elevator pass." JMHS even installed an elevator in compliance with Public Law 94-142. But the junior year was also a year of real involvement. Juniors began raising money for their senior prom and participating in other activities. One highlight of the year was the purchasing of senior rings. PSAT and SAT tests kept everyone busy while juniors hoped for a high score to qualify them for scholarships. Juniors made names for themselves in every activity, sports, pep squad, student council and many others. So many things started in that third year of high school.

Junior president Randy Bomer works with fellow officers Melanie Evetts, treasurer, and Sharon Pickard, secretary, in creating posters for pep rallies. Not pictured is Susan Taylor, vice president.

Competition was fierce this year for the spirit stick at pep rallies. Juniors showed their enthusiasm with balloons and confetti.

Todd Worrell slams the ball for another point.

News Flash! Student # 1 in Handball

Todd Worrell, a junior at John Marshall recently became the U.S. handball champion for his age division of 17 and under. Todd also competed in the Nationals, or world-wide competitions, and placed second.

Handball is a game played on a special court with rules similar to those in ping-pong, and is played tournament style with the winner advancing in the ranks.

Todd Worrell started playing when he was 13. From then on it was non-stop with Todd receiving 45 trophies and becoming Texas state champion. Next year Todd will be in the 19 and under age group in competitions. After high school he intends to continue playing handball while he attends college.

Pick-ups, pick-ups, everywhere, and not a place to park.

Pick-ups, Pick-ups, Everywhere . . .

Rain or shine, every morning people with tight jeans and boots populated certain areas of the campus, specifically the parking lot. Draped over pick-up trucks, they discussed ag, the weather, or what everyone was going to do on Saturday night. No matter where they ended up on weekends different styles of pickups were everywhere. Fords, Chevrolets, Dodges, they were all over. There were old ones and new ones, single colored or multi-colored. Everywhere a person looked they could see a truck. Everywhere.

Whiz Kid Enrolled at Marshall

At John Marshall there is one junior whose scholastic achievements are astounding. This student is Joe Warren. Beginning his freshman year, Joe competed in different math contests throughout the state. He received many firsts in math and also won second place in state Latin competition in the mythology division. His sophomore year Joe received firsts in state competition for mythology and the decathlon. After state finals Joe Warren went to the nationals and won first place in grammar, second place in mythology and in the pentathlon, and fourth in vocabulary. He also maintains a straight 100 average in all his classes.

Joe Warren helps students in his trigonometry class.

Sophs Emerge as Promising Leaders

Making up over a fourth of the enrollment, sophomores were among the most spirited. They showed their enthusiasm in various ways ranging from the "sophomore battle cries" at pep rallies to a fund raising candy sale.

Many sophomores were noted for the activities in which they were involved. Two sophomore boys, Kirby Pair and Troy Brauchle, were on the varsity football team. As a junior varsity cheerleader, Terri Barnett was the lone sophomore on the cheerleading squad. Her enthusiasm brightened up the junior varsity sports activities. Scott McClendon and Alisa Boag were elected duke and duchess for the Snowman's Ball.

Class officers who kept the class active and running smoothly were Ellen Bugg, Brandi Barber, Keri Hankins, and Cindy Crow. These girls, along with Mr. Bert Morris, class sponsor, were in charge of a candy sale to raise money for the class in preparation for their senior activities.

Jon Henley finds a quiet place in the cafeteria to sit back, relax, and enjoy a good book.

Buses Necessary to Extracurricular Activities

School was not always work and no play, as certain organizations found out. Athletic groups such as the football, basketball, volleyball, baseball teams, enjoyed traveling to other schools, school districts, and even other cities to play their respected games. The marching band and the pep squad accompanied these teams to some of the "away" games.

As transportation to these games, buses were used. Sometimes school buses were used and other times, because of distance involved, weather, or rules concerning travel, chartered buses were needed.

School buses were used to travel to games within a 150 mile radius. To enable organizations such as dance team to attend competitions and marching band to go to Astroworld for their end of the year trip, the radius was widened to encompass a 200 mile area. School buses, inexpensive, easily accessible transportation, were used when the destination was within this 150 to 200 miles radius and when there was no specific rush for time.

Comfortable, air conditioned buses such as Kerrville, Continental, and Greyhound, were chartered for trips of over 200 miles and when the conditions for travel were not particularly ideal. Some major reasons for renting chartered buses were when the groups involved had to be home in time for school the next day, or when the weather was extremely hot, cold, or rainy, and school buses could not provide the necessary accommodations.

'Teachers Kids' Have More Fun, More Problems

Out of all the students at school one group was notable: the "teachers' kids". These boys and girls stood out from the rest because their parents were here at Marshall every day. Naturally, this situation had its good points as well as its bad points.

A good thing about having a parent around school all day was as a convenient source of money. "I like having Dad around to give me my lunch money when I forget it", commented sophomore band member, Lisa Johnson. Absentee excuses were not easily forgotten with a mom or dad on campus. The list of pluses goes on and on including the fact that the "teachers' kid" did not have to hassle with buses. The parent's room provided a handy locker and it was great to be able to send books home when meetings or practices meant staying after school. Sophomore Greg Grammer added, "I'm glad Mom teaches here because I leave my books in her room and when I have too many books she takes them home for me."

Having a parent on campus was not always good. Even though the students did not openly admit to a fear of "measuring up" to other's expectations, the apprehension was apparent. They were expected to be on time, be prepared, be polite, and always attentive. Along with losing their own identity to being Mr. or Mrs. So and So's son or daughter, it was rare indeed for the "teacher's kid" to have a frequent doctor's or dentist's appointments and sudden unexpected illnesses!

Vietnamese Students Enjoy Marshall Education

For the past few years, a number of new smiling faces appeared on the John Marshall campus. Among these faces were those of the many Vietnamese students, who had come to John Marshall from various schools of cities throughout the United States. Each one of these students did surprisingly well in his studies and adjustment to the American way of life. The first Vietnamese to arrive at Marshall were Hien and Bao Pham, seniors, and a younger sister B., a sophomore. When asked how they felt about being the first Vietnamese at Marshall, they jointly summed it up as "scary." Three other Vietnamese who joined the student body this past year were Loan and Bao Nguyen, who are sisters, and Dao Nguyen, who is of no relation. They too were a little frightened at the prospect of living among so many new strangers, but found the people both kind and friendly. They also all seemed to agree that, although the classes were hard due to the fact that they were lectured to in a foreign language, education here was fun. Some of the reasons they gave for liking American education were pep rallies, football and basketball games, plays, talent shows, and coed classes. But as surprising as it may seem to American students, one of the American things none of them really prefer is our American hamburger. Instead they like their mother's home Vietnamese cooking and occasionally such things as spaghetti, (Dao's favorite) tacos, and pizza. For the most part though, they all seem to enjoy the American way of life, to which they add much pleasure.

Three new additions to the student body this year are Thao Nguyen, sophomore; Dao Nguyen, sophomore; and Loan Nguyen, junior. They are only a few of the many other Vietnamese students, that have appeared on the school campus the past few years.

Cafeteria Breakfast Helps in Facing School Day Ahead

One of the many things, that helped both the students and teachers face the day ahead of them, was being able to eat a quick breakfast in the cafeteria. Many people discovered that between 7:15-8:25 a.m. they could buy such breakfast items as cereal, coffee, milk, cinnamon rolls, and tacos, as well as the chips and candy normally sold at lunch time. The cereals included frosted flakes and frosted rice in individual serving size boxes. The tacos consisted of egg and chorizo, beef and potato and egg and green chili. Mrs. Esther Meiske, superintendent of the snack bar, stated that only 25-30 percent of the people ate the nutritional breakfast items that were sold. The remainder bought the "junk" food sold at lunch time.

Breakfast was not the only reason for the morning crowds in the cafeteria. Unfinished homework, poor weather, and socializing an exam or talking with friends before classes begin.

also played important roles in the melange of people found in the cafeteria. Some students frantically did their math problems or studied for a test, whereas others casually circled round and discussed such things as which candidate to choose, their plans for the weekend, the games, or how hard an unfair the test was. Whatever the reason, most students seemed to approve of the cafeteria as a place to meet, take refuge from the cold, or get a quick bite to eat.

Clark to Bring Future Rivalry

As the year came closer and closer to an end, many of the students began to realize that they would not see all of the same faces that they had become acquainted with through their years at Marshall. Freshmen who had come from Hobby and Pat Neff had become one team instead of two rival teams like they had been in middle school. They knew that, when Clark was completed, the two schools would again be rivals. Not competitors with the names of Neff and Hobby, but instead they would be opponents with the names Marshall and Clark. When the students were asked how they felt about the new high school, they gave a variety of answers. Some of them thought of it as a bad thing since it would split up friends. But for the most part the students were optimistic in that they said it would make Marshall less crowded. They also knew that true friends remain friends no matter what school they attend.

Title IX Gives Equal Rights for Girls' Athletics

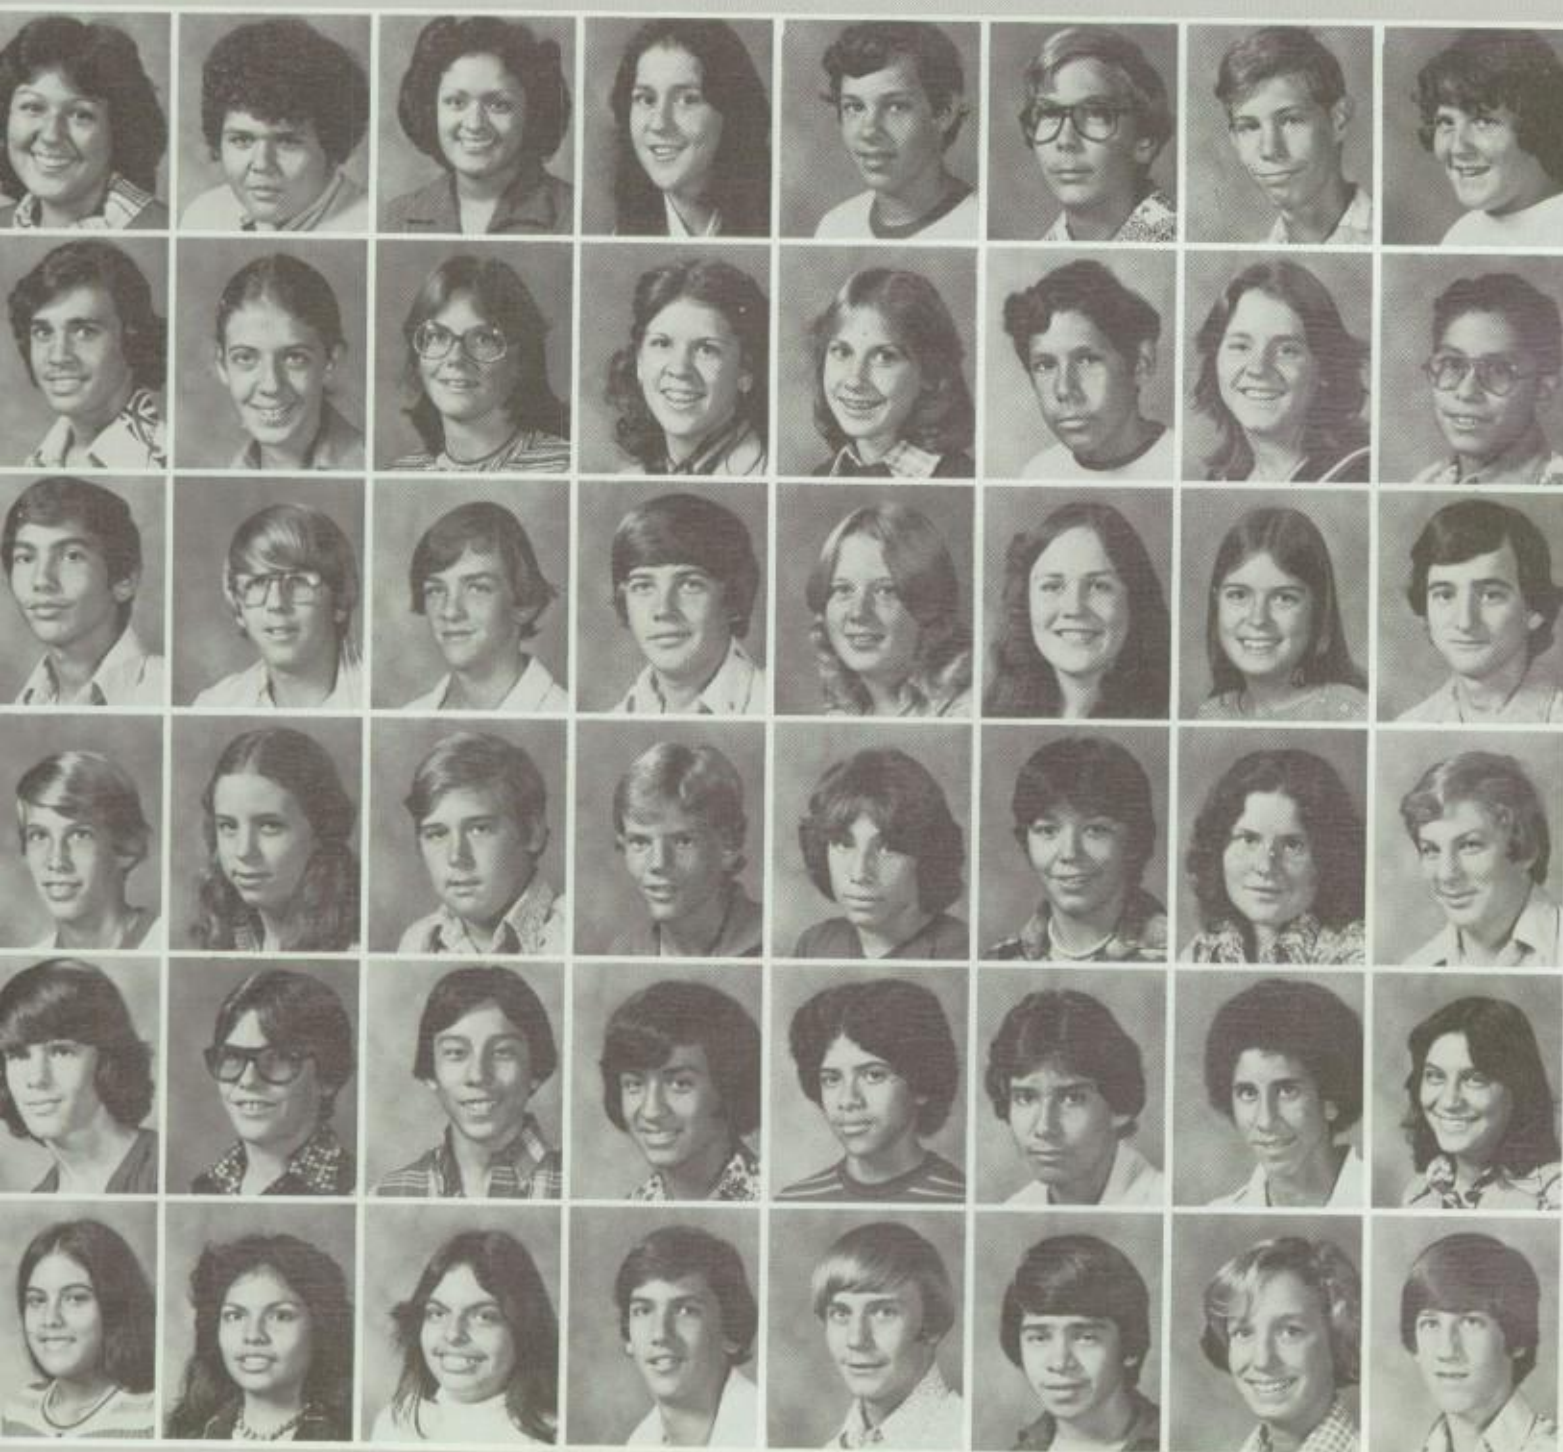

Starting with the 1978-79 school year, boys and girls on both the Clark and John Marshall campuses will be taking part in almost all kinds of noncontact sports together on a daily basis. The reason for this is Title IX, a part of the Education Amendments Act of 1972, which requires all school physical education and athletic programs to give equal attention and budgeting to males and females. It strictly prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in the operation of federally assisted programs in schools, and emphasizes that all athletic equipment, facilities, practice times, tutoring, coaching, locker rooms, and publicity must be the same for boys and girls. Both Clark and Marshall hope to meet these requirements and attain this ideal equality for its students.

Some physical education activities such as football, basketball, and soccer, however, will continue to separate boys and girls on the basis of the physical contact involved. (This restriction concerning physical contact is stated in the Title IX ruling.)

Varsity and Junior Varsity sports such as baseball, basketball, football, and track will also, in all probability, remain segregated, but girls must have equal opportunity, meaning a regulation girls' team to try out for. If a girls' team is not provided, she may, technically, try out for the boys' team if it is a sport which does not involve bodily contact. At this time the only concern in this area is varsity baseball. But according to girls' physical education coach Ms. Jerry Lampkin, "There is a definite possibility of a softball team being organized for the girls within the next few years."

The overall reaction to the proposed implementation of the Title IX ruling is one of enthusiasm and excitement on the part of students, teachers, and coaches alike. All agreed that it will be healthy and fun, and perhaps lead to improvements in the current physical education programs.

Marshall's outstanding girls' Varsity basketball team proved that girls are indeed equal when it came to winning.

Double Pleasure, Fun, Trouble—and Then Some

Have you ever mistaken Bruce for Brent, or called out "Vince" when you meant to say "Vern"? At least you can tell Danny from Darsey and Donald from Donna! If you have twins in your family, or have them for friends, you know that it's a unique but sometimes hectic situation to be in. The registrar's office had seventeen sets of twins and one set of triplets to deal with this year.

When interviewed, most twins agreed that it's nice to always have a friend to turn to, but that the major drawback was the lack of individualism. "We always have to do the same things," was an often heard complaint. But all were in general agreement that being a twin (or triplet) was fun, that it leads to endless possibilities for April Fools' jokes, and that, ultimately, it was worth any hassles that it may cause.

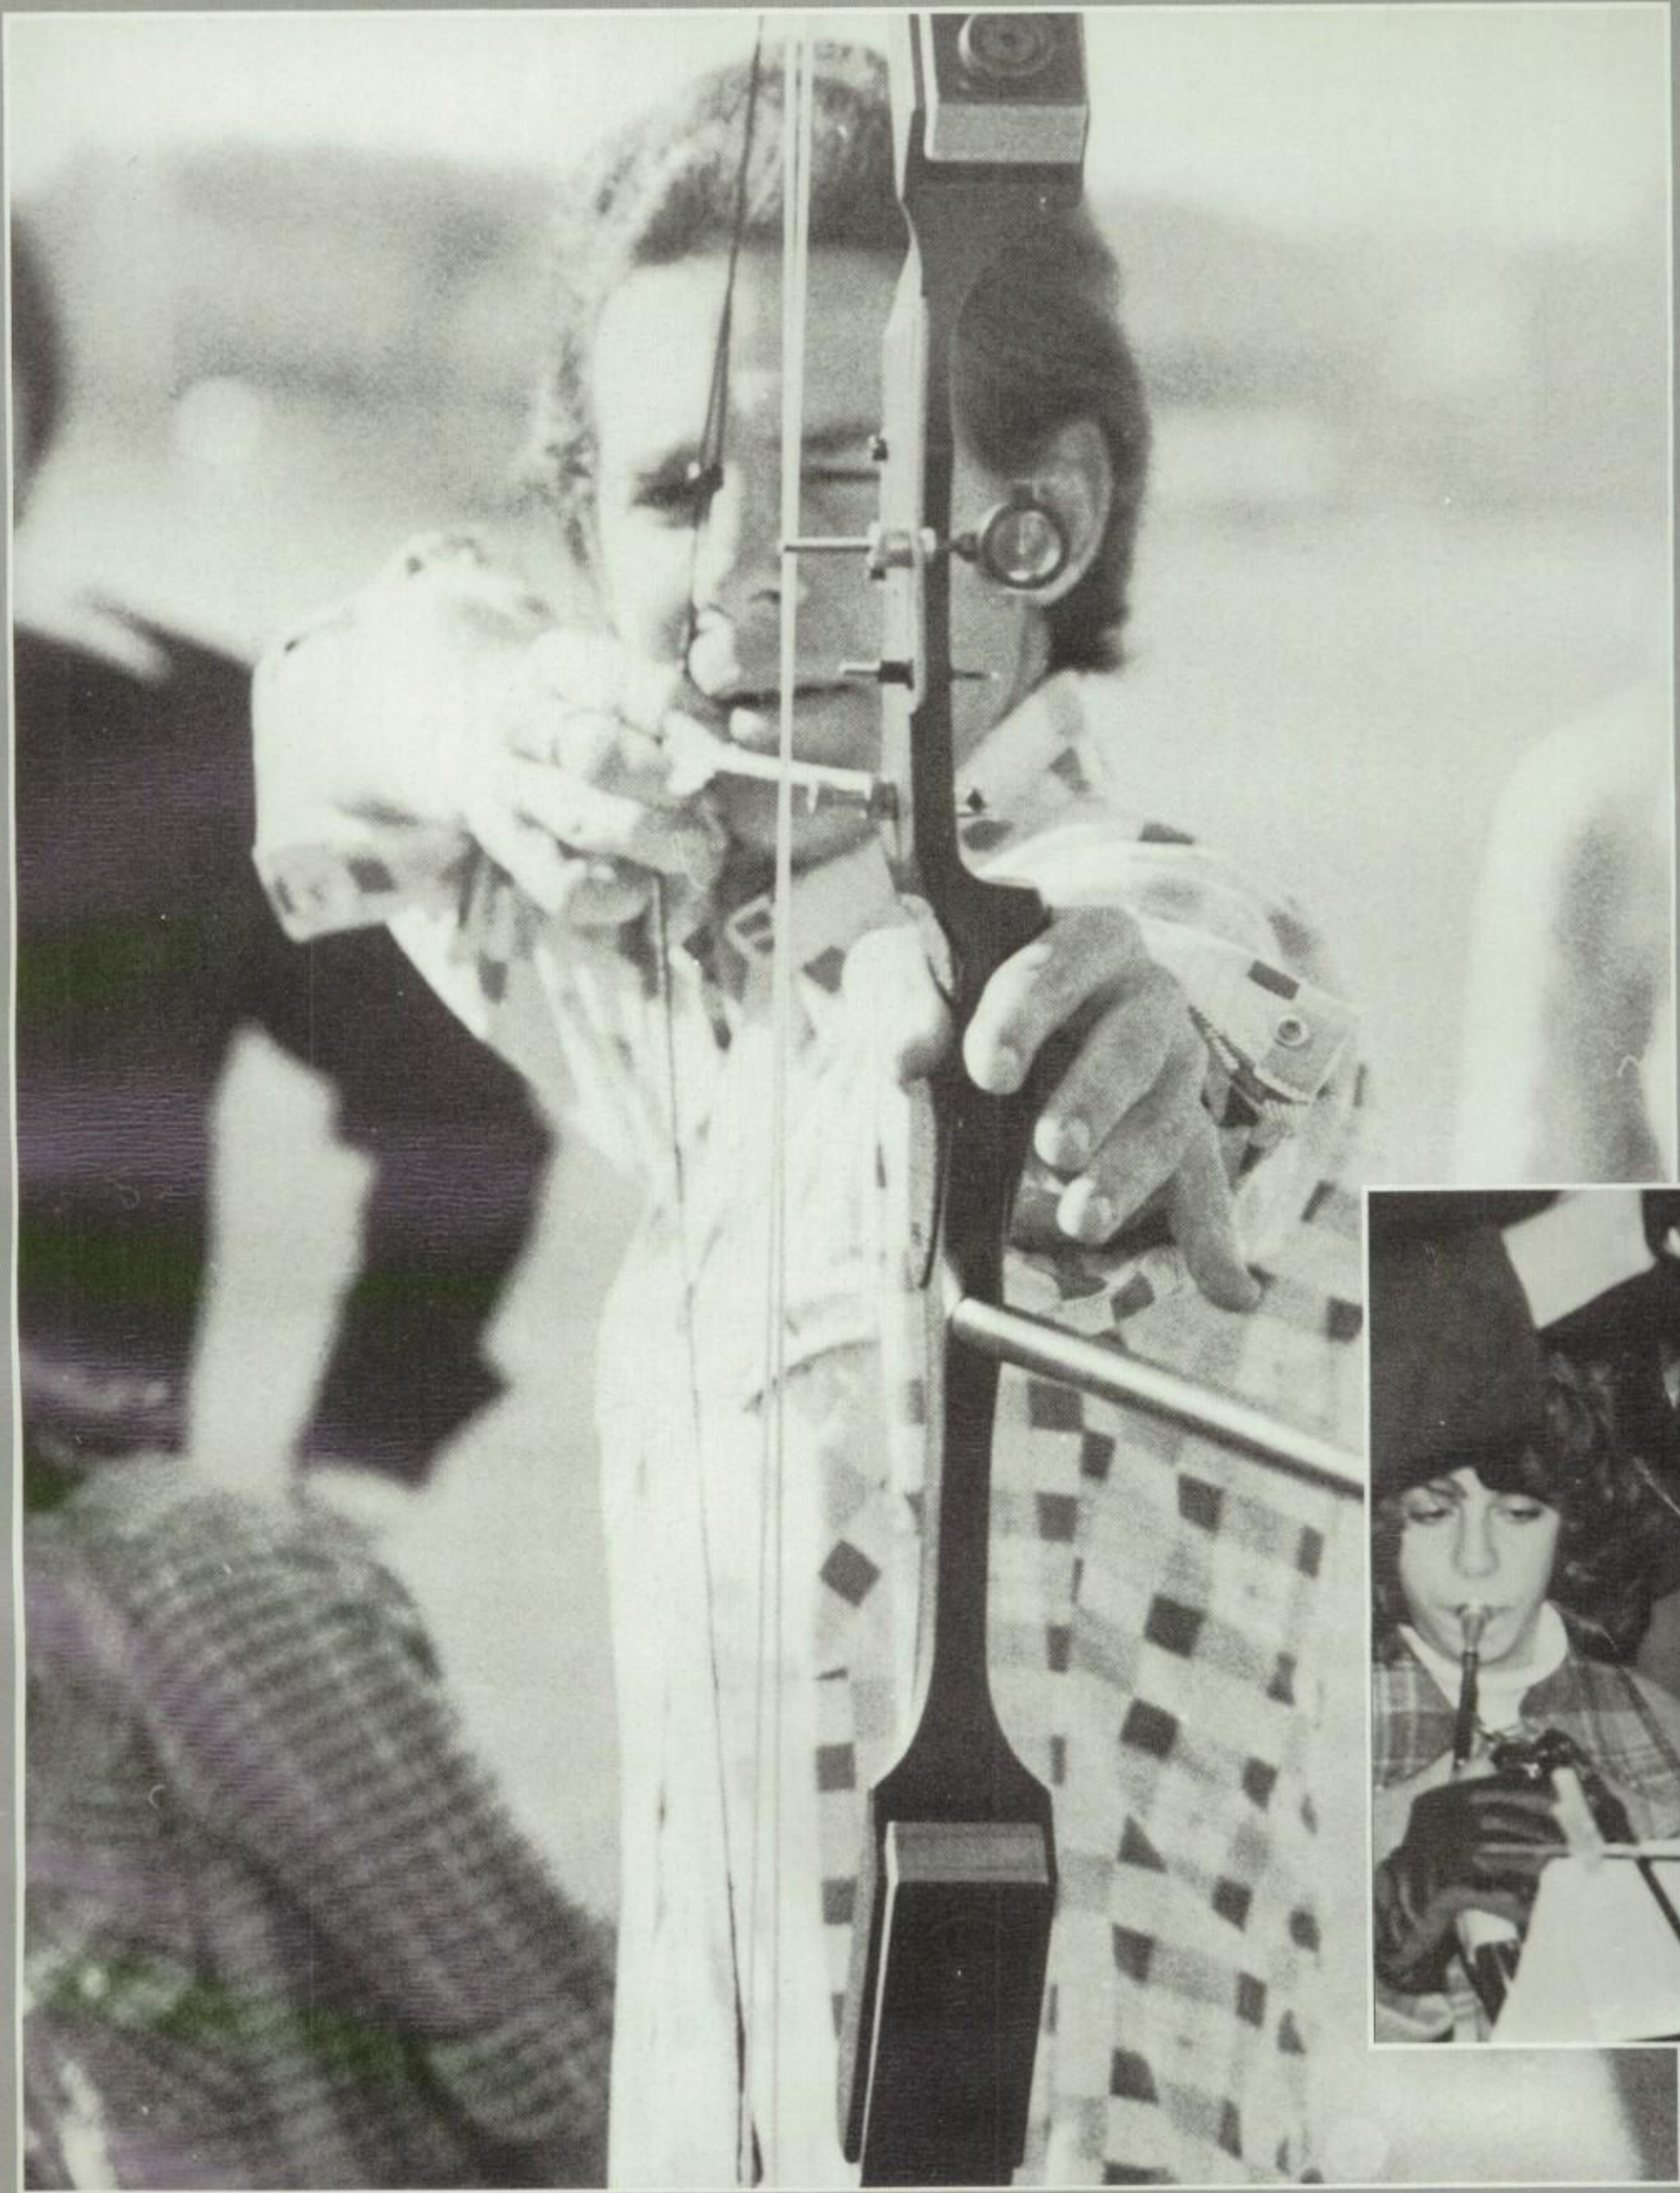

Bruce and Brent Frenchak are one of 17 sets of twins at Marshall.

Clubs represented a variety of student interests and talents. There were approximately 45 clubs chartered for the 1977-78 school year. All clubs were members of Inter-club council, with the presidents of the respective clubs serving as council members. Inter-club council sponsored a program of intramural sports open to any chartered club or class. Sophomore class became the soccer champion, and Mu Alpha Theta defeated all other entries in the ping pong tournament.

Some clubs were geared toward learning vocational skills. Future Homemakers of America and other homemaking clubs had large memberships of both males and females. Other vocational clubs included auto mechanics, architectural drafting, and health occupations.

Other clubs revolved around student hobbies. Those interested in war games were able to test their skills at the meetings of the Table Top Generals. Archery club members held weekly target practices, and for those who enjoyed the rodeo, there was a rodeo club enabling students to practice with and compete against each other.

There were also service and educationally oriented clubs. Each foreign language had a club for its students to participate in. The service organizations at Marshall worked with projects for both school and community. For example, J-Club members assisted in the collection of donations during the Jerry Lewis Telethon, and ecology club members planted trees to help beautify our campus.

Garage Sale Aids AFS Exchange Program Abroad

The American Field Service offers the opportunity to join in another culture for either a summer or a full school year, to experience first hand what it means to live with people in another part of the world.

Marshall High School's chapter of American Field Service sponsored a student from Denmark named Nickolas Schelde. While attending Marshall, Nickolas lived with a sponsor family, the Valentines. MHS also had its own student abroad. Sharon Wales lived and attended school in England.

The big event for the eleven San Antonio AFS chapters came during Fiesta week. These chapters sponsored all of the American Field Service students in Texas to come and enjoy the Fiesta festivities.

Co-sponsored by Mr. Gene Allison and Ms. Suzette Baer, the AFS held weekly meetings every Thursday morning. At these meetings officers accomplished all club business. Club members participated in a garage sale to earn money for Marshall students Nancy Raba and Nancy Hsu who will be going abroad this summer.

Nickolas Schelde, this years foreign exchange student, shows off his new AFS T-shirt while helping at the clubs garage sale.

Heidi Wales reports the latest news from her sister, Sharon, who is attending school in England.

Marshall's Merrymen Meet for Practice, Fun

The major reason for existence of the two year old archery club is to promote interest in the sport of target archery. It takes skill and coordination in order to be good at it as a lifetime sport.

Every Tuesday the club sponsors competition across from JMHS at the Baptist Church baseball field. This year, in addition to regular activities, the club sponsored a mini-semester course at which Mr. Gary Gossman, one of San Antonio's best archery suppliers and instructors, participated.

Field Trips Mean Thrills, Experience

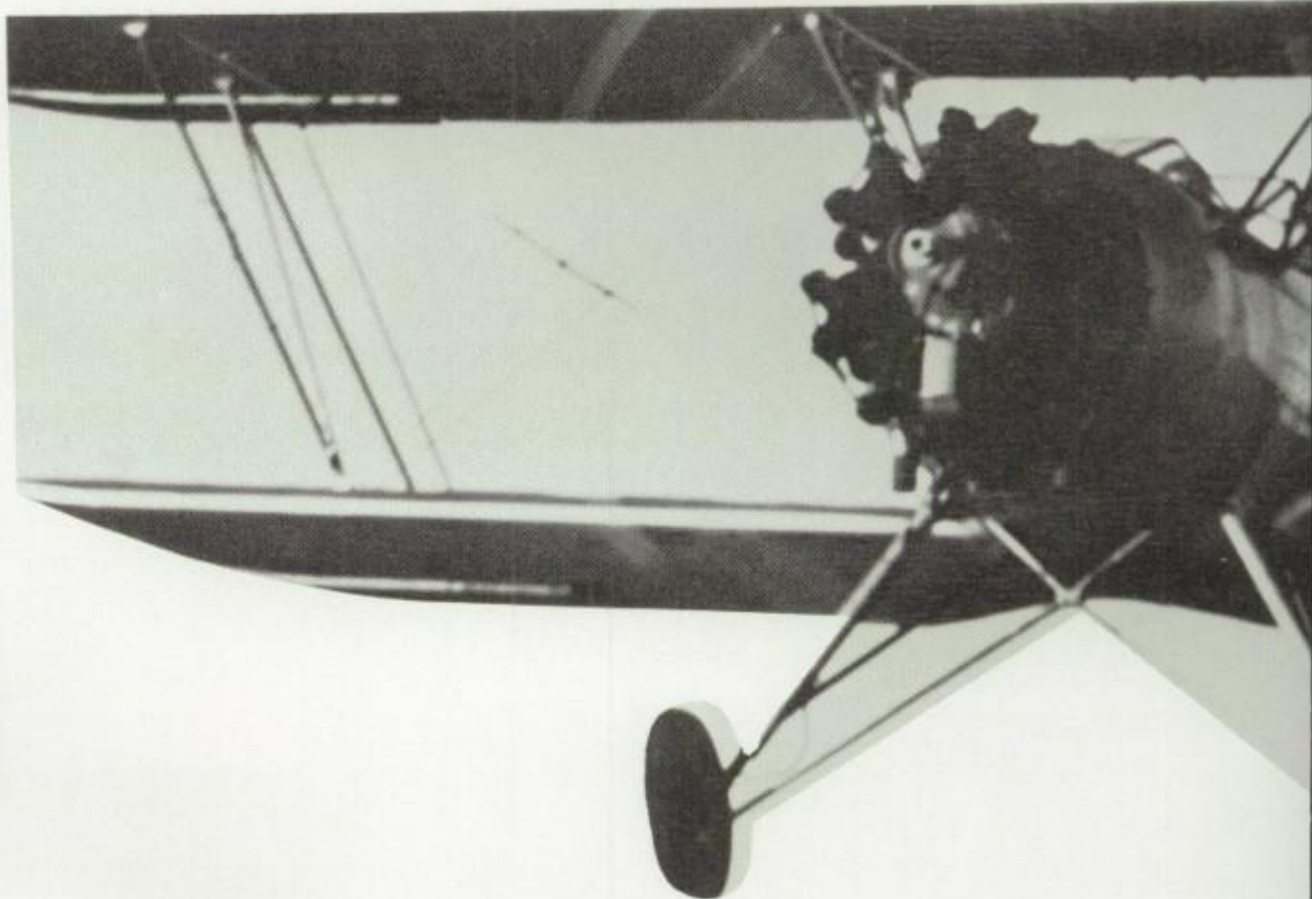

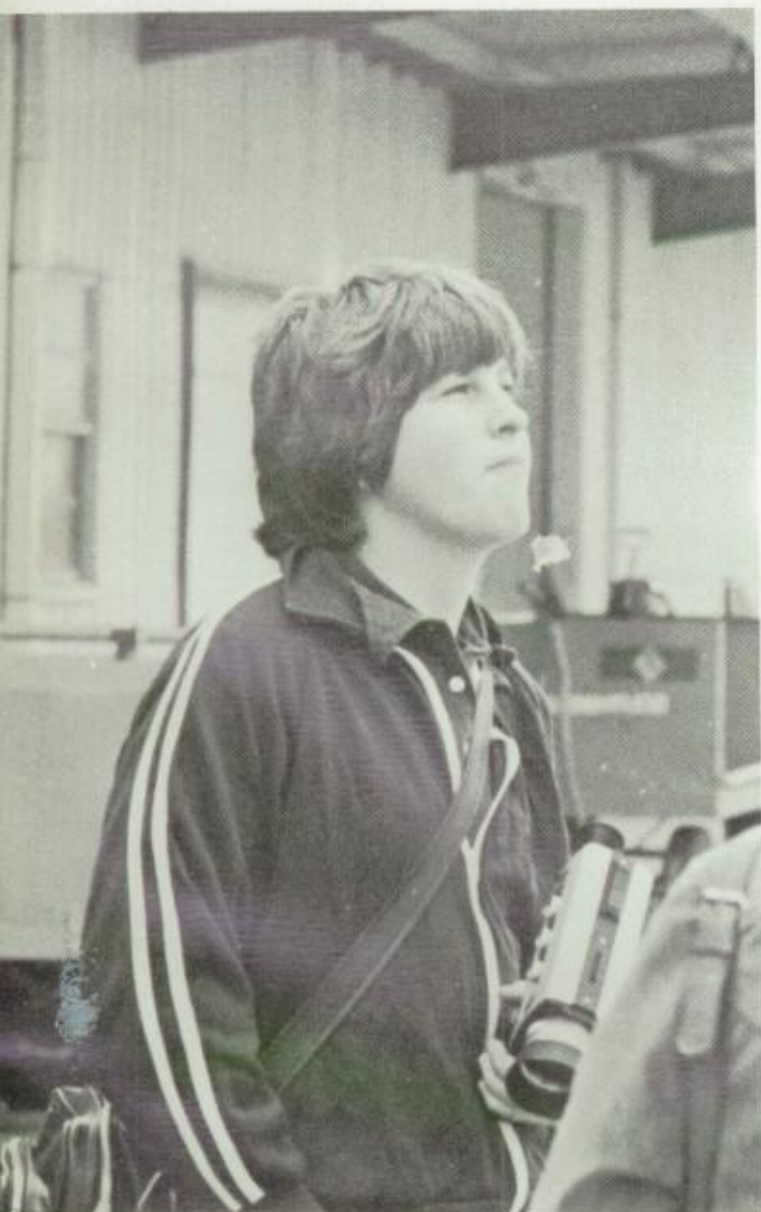

Field trips were a major activity for the Aviation Club. They toured the radar room and control tower at International Airport and Mr. John Luther took students up in his airplane for introduction flights at Westside Airpark. Members got to inspect the cockpit of a Southwest 737 and ask questions of the pilot.

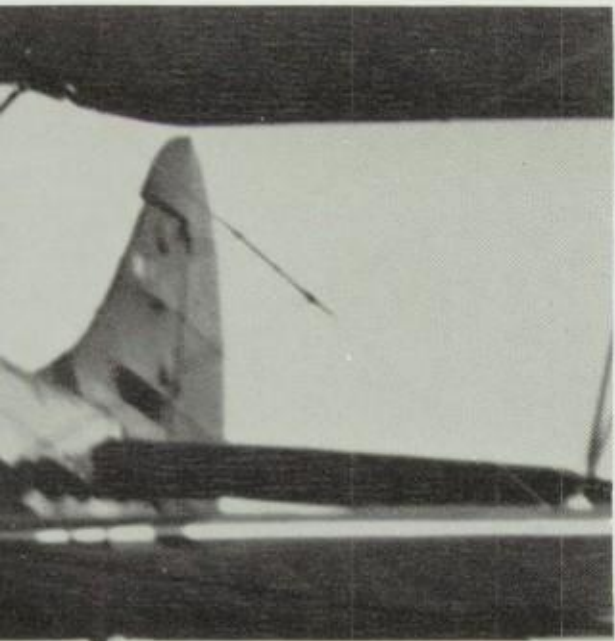

Meetings had to be held on two different days of the week due to conflict with other club meetings. A ground school was sponsored by which students could obtain the written part of their pilot license.

Mr. Luther, who got his license in 1975, has had exposure to aviation. His grandfather joined the Air Force in 1924 and his father was a fighter pilot.

The machinery which recharges a 737's battery is shown to Mr. Luther, Bill Molina, Mark Tuschak, David Bergehard, Dan Johnson, Doug Holman and Linda Klar.

Strike Again!

This is the third year for students to have the opportunity to participate in the Marshall Bowling League. They meet every Wednesday at 4:00 p.m. at the Thunderbowl Lanes to practice.

In November the ten-top bowlers were selected to bowl in the Holmes Invitational Tournament. Marshall excelled over five other schools for the first-place trophy.

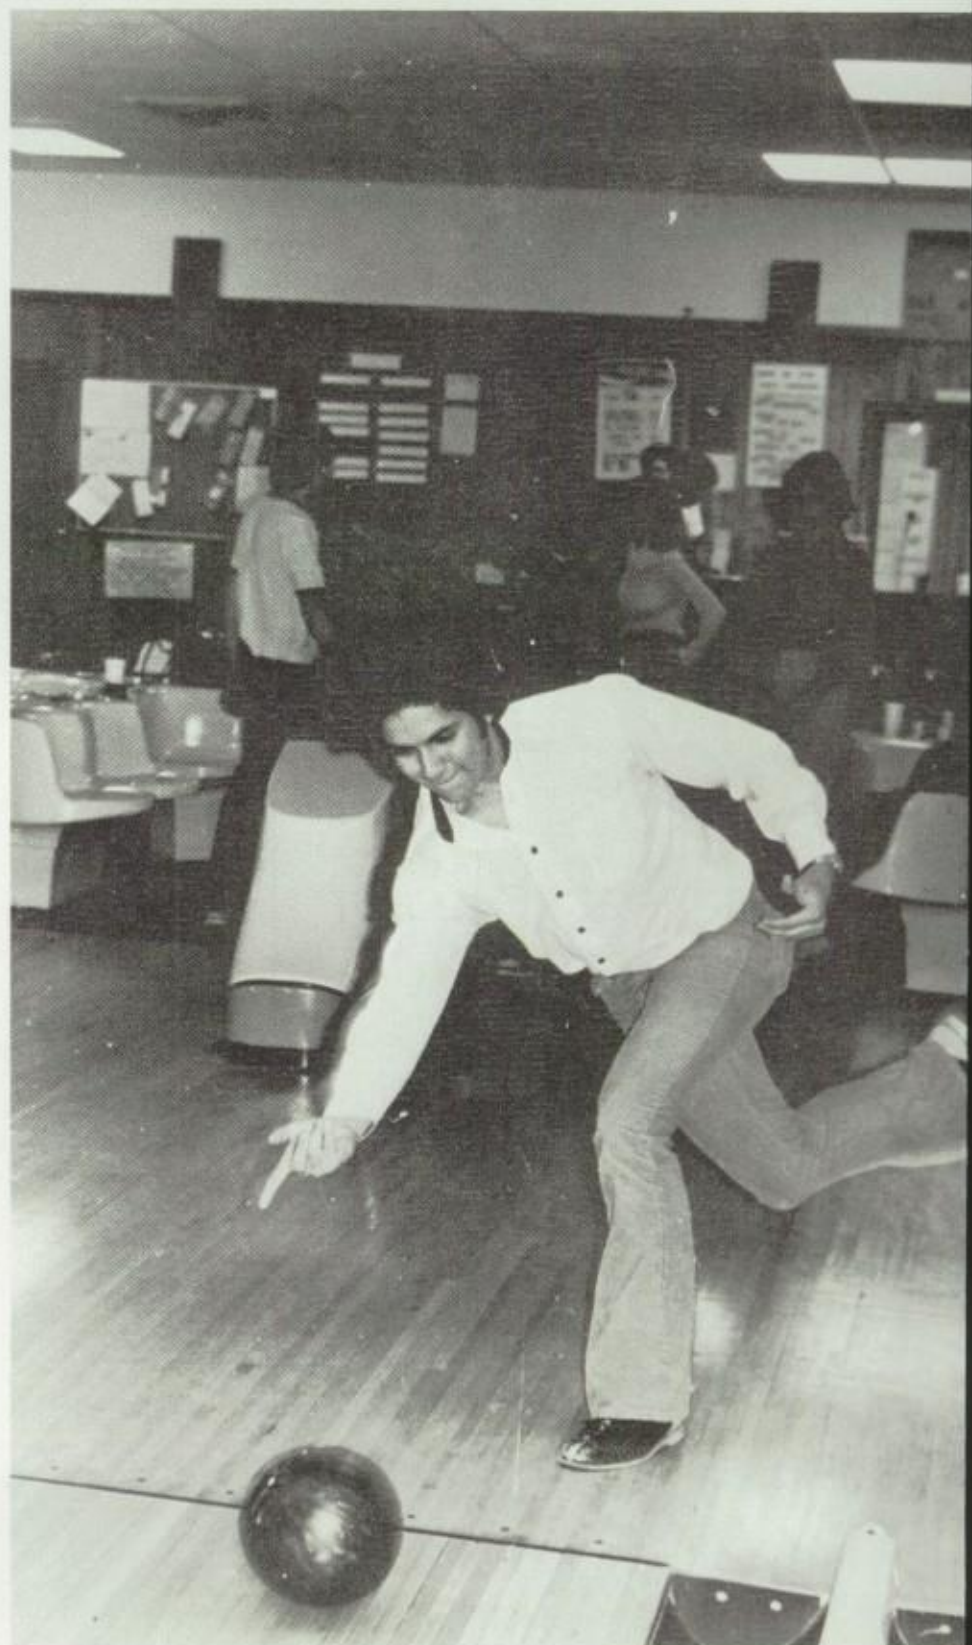

The group is headed by Ms. Lu Pochelski, sponsor; Rick Shasten, president; Mark Miller, vice president; Nancy Armstead, secretary-treasurer; and Parris Dron, sergeant-at-arms.

Campus Life Provides Fellowship, Fun

The friendly, informal atmosphere of Campus Life meetings were enough to make anyone feel welcome. It was an open club with no officers and no members. The meetings, a combination of fun and fellowship, were held in places varying from people's homes to Pizza Hut.

They were best known for their Haunted House but they were also busy with activities such as a ski trip and a Breakaway rally in February.

Field Trips, Guest Speakers Included on FBLA Agenda

Understanding business theory is one of the main goals of FBLA. One business course is required for membership in the club. The organization helps students learn to handle pressure and competition such as one would find in the business world, and prepares them to handle the everyday business of life.

"Business is everywhere", states Ms. Palacios, the enthusiastic sponsor of FBLA and PBL (Phi Beta Lambda) the college counterpart of FBLA. Her duties include keeping the Texas chapters informed of activities and assisting in the coordination of state conferences.

The club took several field trips including one to Data Point Corp. and Government Employees Credit Union. Guest speakers added variety to the weekly meetings at which attendance averaged about twenty members.

Choir Active at Marshall and Around Community

Choir is an active organization at Marshall participating in many competitions and activities. Their performances included singing at the Order of the Sword ceremony and carolling on the river. Two of Marshall's choir members competed for all-state choir in Corpus Christi, and one member, Randy Bomer, was selected to join this organization. Choir also produced their own Pops Concert which entertained students and community alike.

Students Work for Experience, Grade

Distributive Education Clubs of America is a vocational program offered to both juniors and seniors. DECA is a classroom program in which the students attend a one-hour class under Mr. Donnie Newman and Mr. Bobby Myers, who also serve as sponsors of the club. Each year the Marshall club participates in area, state, and national events ranging from advertising to retailing.

The Invisible People

The Drama Club performed an off Broadway play, "The Fantasticks." The 150 seat stage was filled to capacity each night of the performance.

Apples and make-up make strange combinations as Anita Condell helps Mike Brown prepare for the children's play "The Forgetful Wizard."

A day in the life of a member of the technical crew.

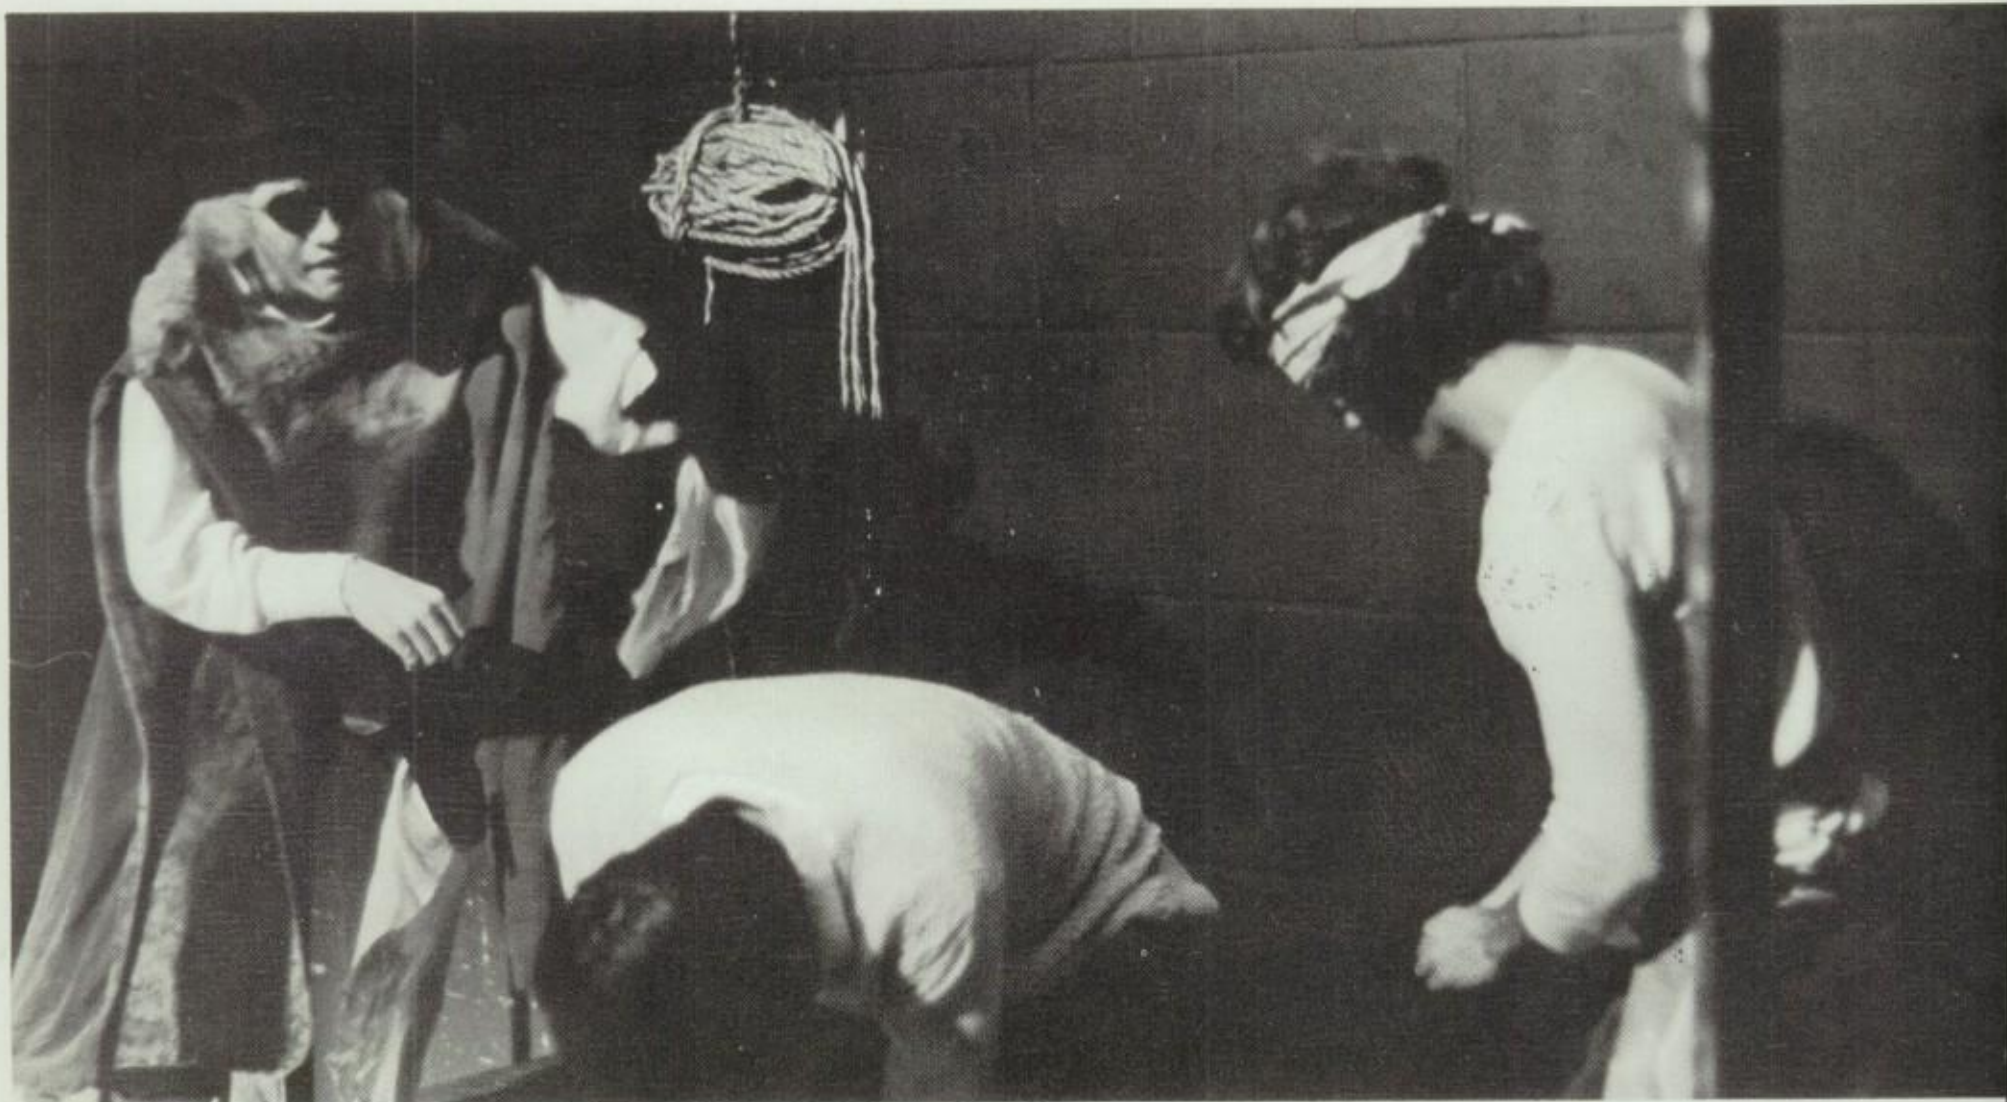

Barry N. Visible was a member of Drama Club but he wasn't an actor. He played a major role in all club plays but seldom received a standing ovation. Barry worked the lights. He and his friends also helped with make-up and sets and contributed to the overall effect of the production. During the week preceding the play Barry would spend about an hour during school building the sets, testing the lights and helping with every thing else. After school there were many hours of rehearsing and perfecting. When opening night finally arrived, everything had to be ready. If something went wrong it was always the technician's fault but if everything went right it was "great acting." Oh, well, it's show time. Lights, curtain, go!

Few people realize the importance of the backstage crew. Without proper sets and lighting a play can be ruined. The effectiveness of the Drama Club play this year was greatly enhanced by this unseen group of people. The Fantasticks relied upon the closeness of the audience to produce a spectacular play. The audience was seated on stage in chairs provided by the band in an effect that was overwhelming. Every actor's expression could be seen. Without the crew of people who built the bleachers for people to sit on the audience would have missed out on a unique experience.

Thespians are an elite group of Drama Club members. To be a member of Thespians one must earn points for each play they are in or help with. It is the national honor society of drama. The Thespians members are Mitch Gray, secretary; Dee Dee Norton, treasurer; Kris Davis, president; Kelly Dugan, Pat Faherty, Greg Washburn, secretary; Byron Freemyer, Phill George, vice president.

To provide a feeling of closeness the drama department built a "stage upon a stage."

"Too much moisture" is Hucklebee's philosophy about gardens. George Southerland portrays the scheming father of a young boy in love.

Phill George learns as Matt that life isn't very pretty. Greg Washburn and Gene Sloan perform the roles of the pirates who teach him a few lessons about life.

Julie Bailey, the mute, helps Debra Bower put on her most prized possession, a paste-diamond necklace.

It Was Fantastick

Each year Drama Club produces a play with only active club members involved. This year, under the direction of Marion Sweatmon, the club performed The Fantasticks, a play about life and love. It was put on by a group of actors with all-state choir member Randy Bomer leading the vocal part of the play.

Phillip George and Debra Bower played two lovers brought together by their scheming fathers, George Southerland and Byron Freemyer. The fathers had some of the best lines and songs in the play and provided much of the comic relief for the production.

ECOLOGISTS CAN DIG IT

Ecology club has been an active part of the care of the school. With the help of the PTA, many new plants were placed around the school. The freshman class steering committee assisted in this project also.

Ecology club sponsored an earth week in April to promote interest in their club. Many participated in this, some of the activities included an essay and photography contest. Films were shown in the auditorium to all those interested.

A field trip was taken to San Marcos for the biology club's tenth annual spring exhibit at Southwest Texas State University. They also visited Natural Bridge Caverns.

*God is our guiding light,
just like a Bic.
Whenever we need him we give him a flick.
But God help us realize that you're always there,
And that you will help us
when life's hard to bear.
Help us to love, which is better than hate.
Help us to forgive before it's too late.*

FCA — Funky, Cool, Alright

Fun and faith are the two bywords of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. This organization provided opportunities for its 134 members to meet with people of the same interests. Being one of the most active clubs at school, the FCA participated in a different project each month and held meetings every Wednesday. Some of their projects included sponsoring a family at Christmas, participating in a walk-a-thon, and visiting several nursing homes. Each year FCA also participates in the intramural activities put on by Student Council. As the saying goes, "FCA all the way."

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes is one of the most important and active clubs at Marshall.

Each week at the Woodstone Townhouses members of the John Marshall FCA meet. Their discussions include topics ranging from love and hate to the theory of evolution.

Le Cercle Français est le Premier d'état!

The French Club is first in state! Each year French Club earns money for the French Symposium. This is a statewide contest in which about 40 schools participate each year. When Mrs. New first came to Marshall three years ago she took the club to the competition and received fifth place in state. The next year the members received second place in state. In the 1978 competition, held in Midland, Texas, they went all the way and garnered the first place state trophy. Pat Campbell won second place "Outstanding French Student" and Karen Roloff, a sophomore, was awarded third place "Outstanding French Student." Besides the many divisions of poetry, prose, civilization, and grammar, there are also categories in arts and costuming, choir, and ballet. In each and every category the John Marshall French Club placed one of their members. Out of the 41 students that attended, 39 awards were received. Mrs. New and the French Club members have a right to be proud.

Students Congregate for JMHS Stock Show

The Future Farmers of America combine to create one of the most energetic clubs at Marshall. These students interests range from horticulture to pig or calf raising or working on farm machinery. The future farmers work in their field of interest to further their career in agriculture. The combined efforts of the students turned out a terrific stock show this year. The John Marshall Stock Show and Rodeo was one of the biggest in high school stock shows in San Antonio.

Education On The Move

always ready to lend a helping hand or give advice is Mrs. Katsy Morris, club sponsor.

The future teachers had a busy year full of hard work, fun, and dedication. Their activities ranged from a Halloween carnation sale to teaching days that gave them an idea of what teaching was really like.

The year started off with a bang! A Halloween carnation sale added to the club's treasury. On November 29 an installation banquet was held for the new FTA officers. The dress was casual to semi-formal for the candle-light induction ceremony.

The weekend of February 17-19 held excitement for the delegates chosen to attend an annual state-wide convention in Dallas.

Various teaching days were scattered throughout the year with club members going to schools such as Colonies North, Hobby, and Shenandoah to help teach classes. These teaching days proved to be worthwhile for the students and schools involved.

"I feel that FTA is one of the most important clubs at Marshall. I also feel that it has been underrated and people should realize that it is fun as well as being a good learning experience," stated Cheryl Luedecke, club sergeant-at-arms.

HERO Serves Handicapped

The students that are enrolled in HERO's are involved in Health Economic Related Occupations. At the beginning of the year the members got together and decided on a certain organization of people to work with. They decided to give their services to the Methodist Mission Home. During Halloween and Christmas the members had a party for the people at the Mission Home. Later in the year they took the people from the Mission Home to the zoo. HERO's also had a guest speaker come and talk to them from the Kidney Foundation.

Junior Engineers Tour Solar Project

The John Marshall chapter of the Junior Engineering Technical Society functions as an educational organization to further knowledge and generate interest in engineering and physics. This year, field trips to the Trinity Solar Project, Southwest Research Foundation, and Data Point, gave members a better insight into the engineering field. The group also had speakers from Trinity University lecture on integrated circuits to provide information for individual projects in that area.

Drafting Students Build School Model; Place in Contests

Industrial Arts is open to all students who plan to pursue a career in drafting. Members were eligible to enter the district contest held in April. The contest was in two parts: timing and competency. The sweetheart for the year was Liz Parrillo.

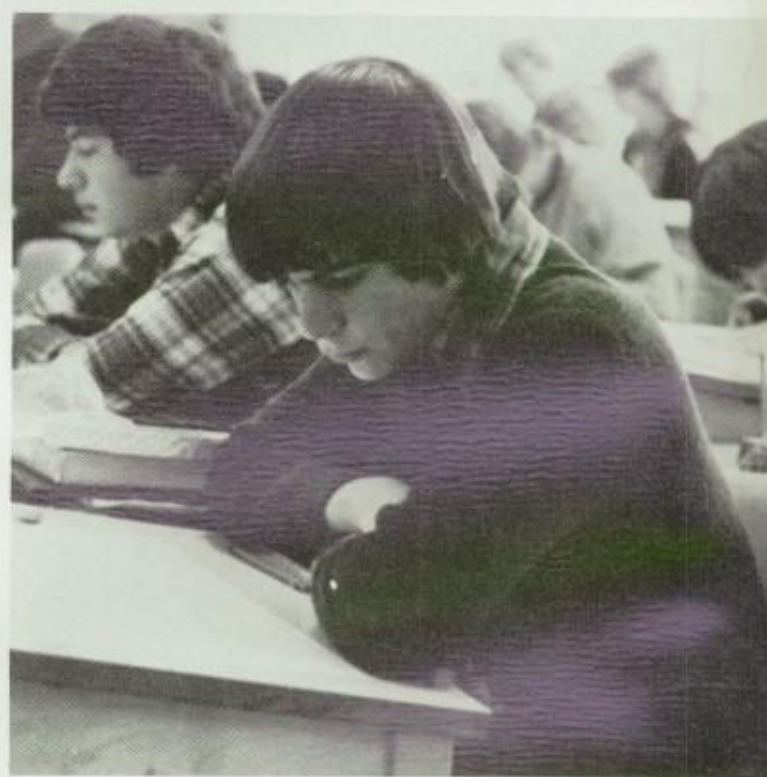

The final project of the club was to build a scale model of the John Marshall High School campus.

Service With a Smile!

"By our deeds so shall we be known" was thought and stated many times throughout the 1977-78 J-Club year. The J-Club is a service organization formed to aid charity and community projects. Some of the years activities were selling Halloween candy for Kidney foundation, being Santas Helpers, collecting for Muscular Dystrophy, the Mother-Daughter tea, and the Father-Daughter banquet, and many others.

The J-Club is a selective organization for juniors and seniors. Prospective members are chosen by teacher recommendation. After a limited number of girls are chosen, they are initiated by the old members. Initiation included dressing in whatever way your "big sister" dreamt up, taking her to breakfast, and composing an original J-Club song.

J-Club tradition was continued in the monthly naming of a J-Club Beau. The Beaus are chosen on the record of their activeness in school functions and spirit. This years Beaus were September—Matt Menger; October—Darren Lancaster; November—Steve Tietze; December—Reed Gabriel; January—Byron Freemyer; February—Jack Broberg; and March—Max Evetts.

The officers were kept busy with all the club functions. This years officers were President, Cindy Fox; First Vice-President, Holly Howland; Second Vice-President, Janet Ligon; Secretary, Carol Stevens; Treasurer, Terry Wagner; Chaplain, Pam Barron; and Historian, Debbie Wegmann.

LEOS GIVE TIME TO HELP OTHERS

The LEOS club, a service organization run in conjunction with the Lion's Club, boasted 22 members. Their activities ran throughout the school year as well as the summer.

The main project of the club was to build a miniature golf course for the Cerebral Palsy Center on Babcock Road. Among numerous fund-raising projects was their main money raiser, a miniature golf tournament held at Holmes High School.

Other activities included frequent visits to the Crippled Children's Camp near Kerrville. Club members helped the children at the camp by teaching them hiking, swimming, tennis, and canoeing. Christmas was a busy time, with club members going to orphanages and nursing homes to give parties. A Valentine candy sale was held February 9 thru 14.

Lifeline - Growing in Spirit and Numbers

The quiet club that has grown 150 percent over the last two years offered fellowship and learning of the Christian faith. Members of this non-denominational group took an active part in the club and in planning the Bible studies presented at their bi-weekly meetings. A missionary from Mexico and local church ministers were listed among the guest speakers.

The atmosphere at the meetings was informal and friendly. "No one can accuse us of not having fun," stated club president Alan Wartes.

Math Students Named to Society

Mu Alpha Theta is an honorary mathematics society composed of students who excel in mathematic skills. Members attended interscholastic contests where they had an opportunity to apply their mathematic skills in competition with students from other high schools for top ratings and awards.

The group headed by Jimmy Adair, president; Kelly Carpenter, vice president; Mary Valdez, secretary; and Lisa Meffert, treasurer sponsor a tutoring program.

Members had various ideas about how the club T-shirts should read, so the matter was settled by a vote.

Students Named to Honor Society

The purpose of National Honor Society is to create leadership, stimulate a desire to render service, promote worthy leadership, and develop character in all students.

The most important function of this group is its tutoring service, which operates throughout the school year to those students desiring help outside the classroom.

New members are accepted annually at the initiation ceremony in the spring. Juniors must have an overall 90 average and seniors an over all 88.

The group is headed by Cliff Singleton, president; Ilene Belinsky, vice president; Jackie Cheslyn, secretary; Paul Doucette, treasurer; Kellie Carpenter, chaplain; Kathy Keegan, reporting secretary; Mrs. Marjorie Parrigan and Ms. Clementine Rodriquez, sponsors.

The 68 enthusiastic members of Office Education Association started the year off by making student ID's. They also had an installation banquet to install new officers, had a Halloween breakfast, and participated in area, state, and national OEA conferences. Along with participation in service projects such as a walkathon for cancer, visiting the Mission Road Foundation, holding an Easter party for a children's home, and special olympics, the club found time to have a little fun of their own. They had a Christmas Tea, a Christmas party, a skating party, and an end of the year "Farewell Banquet".

Ram Band Maintains Standards

Marching season found the band singing and dancing to "Hello Dolly" and tapping their toes to "Rocky", "Star Wars", "Shaft" and others. But this particular time of year had its pressures and the band members felt it. There were long hard practices before school, during fourth period and after school on Thursdays. Fridays were especially busy with early morning rehearsals, second period pep rally, fourth period practice, practice again at 5 and then finally the game and the halftime show.

About the time marching contest came around, the band also had to prepare for their performance in the Astrodome so they committed two different shows to memory. With the time limit of eight minutes for the marching contest, the band performed a show worthy of number 1 ratings in 7:59.

Autographed footballs from the Houston Oilers and the Kansas City Chiefs were given the band in appreciation of their performance and some band members found it worth it to be able to see a football game so closely, have the possibility of being on TV, or the opportunity to get the autographs of the football players.

Concert season started off with the Christmas concert in which concert B band, percussion and woodwind ensembles and symphonic band performed.

District, area and regional band try-outs were next on the agenda and Mr. Charles Kuentz was very proud to have Mary Converse, Myrick Crampton, Devin Newkirk, Gaylia Newkirk, Chuck Opalenik, Paul Stumpff, and Victor Weiss advance to area.

Next, the band divided into three concert bands in order to go to UIL contest. Meanwhile everyone began working on their music for solo and ensemble contest.

Throughout all this, some band members did double time by being in percussion or woodwind ensemble or stage band.

During marching season, drum major Paul Stumpff lifts weights to enable him to direct for long periods of time.

Kurt Geisler and Danny Leuvano are known for their clowning around and fantastic drumming.

The Peppy People

Ramblerettes—248 girls whose talent, pride, and love for Marshall was an inspiration to all students. Divided into three groups—dance team, pep squad, and cheerleaders—Ramblerettes was a fulltime job for all girls involved. The pressure of going to games and pep rallies, making posters and spirit ribbons, and dancing or cheering all the time magically disappeared on game days when the girls donned their maroon and white uniforms and sparked the excitement of an entire school.

Dance Team—Seventy five sophomore, junior, and senior girls were involved in this unit of Ramblerettes. These dancers went to camps, clinics, competitions, and athletic events, displaying the talent that made them known city-wide: their nose-bruising high kicks. Dance team members could tell of those early morning crying sessions as they stretched out on the football field at seven a.m. in 35 degree weather.

Booker, their efforts, which amounted to approximately four hours a day during summer, competition, and football season, were put forth for their directors, their organization, and themselves—in that order. Effort they gave and smiles, applause, and respect they gained for that effort. Sophomore member Dee Dee Lewis verbalized the feeling well: "You live and breathe dance team and dancing, but you love every minute and you're so proud of yourself and your group that you could burst!"

Y•E•L•L Everyone YELL!!

The words "Pep Squad" have come to be commonly heard in high school halls. But at Marshall in 1978, the pep squad unit of the Ramblerettes had a special pizzazz, a special flair, a special amount of energy. The pep squad members used their daily hour-long class period to stretch and condition themselves in preparation for spring dance team and cheerleader tryouts. They resounded with cheers at football, basketball, and baseball games and spread Ram spirit to other Marshall students as well.

Pep Squaders Suzy Tietze, Terri Rogers, Diana Cavin, Laurie Chafin, and Brandi Barber show that spirit is profuse at Ram basketball games.

Among the leaders of the school, cheerleaders rank high. Those ten girls always flash spontaneous smiles and are always eager to pitch in and help anyone. They are ambassadors, representatives, leaders, workers, spirit spreaders, and friends.

Last year, the cheerleaders attended summer camp at SMU in Dallas. They received superior ribbons every night at evaluation. Out of 200 schools attending the camp, ten were nominated for the top honor, the Award of Excellence. The Marshall Varsity received this nomination and then won the award. In addition, Gwen Andrews received an invitation to join the NCA staff as an instructor.

On September 16 the cheerleaders entered the Joskes competition sponsored by Coca Cola. The Varsity took the city championship for the second consecutive year, and the junior varsity took fifth place. Also, head cheerleader Karen Keiffer was awarded membership to the Association of Distinguished Young Americans Who's Who Among American High School Cheerleaders.

The Rampage, John Marshall's student newspaper, is a vital part of communication within the school and in the community. Published tri-weekly, the Rampage includes editorials, features, and columns as well as complete news and sports coverage for John Marshall High School, its organizations, activities and events. Staff positions in the Rampage are held by members of the Journalism II class with beginning journalism students, enrolled in Journalism I, serving as reporters.

This year, for the first time in history, the Rampage was mailed to homes of all Marshall students in addition to being distributed to all the students on campus. News and activities of the PTA and the Booster clubs, previously published in a monthly newsletter, was incorporated into the Rampage thereby increasing the school newspaper's service to the community and eliminating the need for a separate newsletter.

Rodeo is a never ending struggle between man and beast. Meeting the challenge requires a combination of skill, endurance, and motivation.

Ridin' the range seems to be one of the favorite pastimes of the John Marshall Rodeo Club members. Throughout the 1977-78 school year, the Rodeo Club held trailrides, parades, and their own John Marshall Rodeo on March 31 and April 1. Individuals also participated in other rodeos and won numerous awards.

During the rodeo, preparations for a single ride takes many hours. Checking the background of a bull or bronc and then rechecking just to be safe demands total involvement and concentration from the cowboy before, during, and after the ride. Whether riding the rodeo for a hobby or pursuing it as a career, these students bust brons and catch calves for the love of competition.

Mary Story sits high in the saddle.

Members of the Rodeo Club participate in their annual trailride. Enjoying the afternoon ride are Allen Stovall, Mitchell McMullen, Carol Swanson, Cindy Thienpoint, Tina Zavash, Jerry Moore, Mike Martin, Carolyn Berry, Mrs. Laubach, Wanda Laubach, Earl Herring, and Jerry Walker.

Rodeo Is the Cowboy's Life!

The dictionary definition of rodeo is "an exhibition in which the skill of cowboys is displayed." But before receiving the winning buckle or cash prize the cowboy puts in many hours of hard working practice. Only he knows of the broken collar bones, skinned shins, pulled muscles, and lame horses. If he gets thrown, he gets back on. If the cowboy loses, he tries again. He travels for miles pulling horses for one throw at a calf or one ride on a bull. But all these hardships add up when the winnings come rolling in.

Marshall bull rider Jerry Walker holds on for the money at the Alamo Area High School Rodeo.

Wendy Smith, club president, conducts another Wednesday afternoon Spanish club meeting.

El Club Amistad Adelante had an enjoyable, worthwhile year. Club members gave their time to trick or treat for UNICEF at Halloween. As a major fund raiser, a candy sale was held with club members working hard to make it an overwhelming success. The San Antonio River was made festive at Christmas time by barges filled with enthusiastic Spanish club carolers. Club tee shirts were sold throughout the year which also added to the club's treasury. Delegates were elected to attend the annual district and state Pan American Student Forum conventions which proved to be enjoyable learning experiences.

Aside from sponsoring the Spanish Club, Miss Maria Gonzalez teaches four different levels of Spanish.

Club members Wendy Smith, Diantha Bales, Matt Menger, and Jorge Fernandez, join Ronnie Gonzalez (center) in leading Christmas caroling on the San Antonio river.

Sociedad Honoraria Hispánica

The Spanish Honor Society is a newly formed organization at John Marshall. Mrs. Catherine Golightly initiated the club in the spring of '77. The honor society is structured similar to the organization at Winston Churchill High School. Members are chosen for the club by the Spanish department for their outstanding achievements in class as well as in contests. In the spring of each year, new members are initiated into the club in a candlelight ceremony. The club's purpose is to provide a greater insight about the Spanish culture. It can help broaden the students' appreciation for others and for their language.

The club members tutor students who are having difficulties in Spanish classes. The tutoring is held before school in Mrs. Golightly's room. The tutoring provides supplemental reinforcement on a one to one basis. The Spanish Honor Society is a group of admired students who have been rewarded for their high achievements in Spanish.

Once A Luxury, Now A Necessity

Not long ago stage bands in high school were a luxury, now they are a necessity. Stage band familiarizes students with jazz, modern, and rock improvisational music and gives them a basic background of music theory. The group, which met sixth period, was made up of top quality musicians.

They were frequently invited to perform; however, the majority of the students were in A band which was also in demand, therefore stage band performances were limited. They did perform at the Christmas concert and for an Air Force benefit.

A new electric Rhodes piano was purchased this year to replace the regular upright piano which did not produce enough sound.

Council Coordinates Activities

Denise Kana, vice president, fills council in on the facts.

The student council was kept busy by sponsoring various activities throughout the year. The year started off with a teacher tea to acquaint the teachers with the new officers. The Howdy Dance was held to welcome the students back to school after summer vacation. Homecoming, an annual event, was put on in November at the Lackland Officer Club. The talent show was presented in February with the help of the council. Service projects included sponsoring a foster family at Christmas, collecting money for Easter Seals, helping with the voter registration drive, assisting with special olympics, and participating in a walkathon with Holmes High School.

TTG Recreate the Korean Conflict

Table Top Generals play war games by studying history and simulating military and diplomatic conflicts that have taken place or might take place in the future. In October, they had a diplomatic simulation similar to the Korean conflict in a game called dangerous parallels. Later, in December, TTG had a tournament where they used military simulations.

Not only were the Table Top Generals active clubwise, but also in the intramurals. They participated in basketball and soccer competition.

Deutsche Wohlgeuch; Romanus Victoria

The Wolfgang Amadeus Club is a club which strives to learn about the classics through various city and state competitions. A good part of the year was spent on preparation for contests. Their social activities included an "ice cream social", introduction of new club members and Christmas caroling down the river. Their year ended with an annual banquet which consisted of a look at the club's activities, competitions and awards, and finally, the introduction of new officers.

Five Win at State; Soccer, Bake Sale, Socials Provide Fun

The Vocational Architectural Drafting Club has been a socially active club. In November they participated in intramural soccer competition. In December, as a fund raising project, VADC held a bake sale. One of their club meetings, a social gathering, took place at Pizza Hut to combine work with eating.

The club's participation in VICA District Five competition proved successful. The drafting skills competition was held March 3, at Marshall. David Shumway placed second in Technical Information which qualified him for state; also placing were Donald Seidel, third and Nathon Moore, fourth. The exhibit drawings competition was held at Holmes High School. In this competition, Nathon Moore and Donald Seidel qualified for state with first places, while David Shumway and Clay Wilson received second place awards. Third place winners were Sam Mencia, Mike Weaver, Julie Zinck, Debby Hughen, and Evan Miller. Also held at Holmes was the notebook exhibition. In this competition, Debby Hughen and Julie Zinck qualified for state with first places.

Members Driven by Love of Money, Quest for Skills

Industrial Cooperative Training students had the advantage of the best of both worlds. They were trained during the academic day in industrial skills and applied these skills in jobs later in the day. The students had to work between 15-20 hours a week in order to receive the ICT credit. Officers were Scott Hyman, Kathy Barron, Don Seidel, and Brett Van Delden.

Air Conditioning Is 'Cool' Course

Students in air conditioning and refrigeration use theory and practice to learn to repair and maintain central air conditioners and furnaces, ice makers, automobile air conditioners, and water fountains, as well as refrigerators and freezers. Instruction is equal to any other offered in San Antonio. Each student is followed for five years in his career by the instructor upon graduation.

Start Your Engines

Auto Mechanics Club is open to all students who have pursued the study of automobiles, trucks and farm equipment, their engines and the repair of those engines. Each spring a district and a state competition is held. Each student is eligible to enter in two categories: a written exam and a practical demonstration of skills learned in the classroom.

Vocational Students Get Head Start

Through the help of the vocational education programs, eligible juniors and seniors were able to work at jobs in on-the-job training situations. Classroom instruction enabled them to acquire the skills and knowledge necessary for a success.

Occupational opportunities available ranged from medical assistants and food service to sales promotion and television repair. Students not only acquired skills for job entry through vocational education but also gained a basis for growth in skill and knowledge which gave them some assurance for lifetime employment.

Metal Trades is open to all students having an interest in welding and in machinery. Members are eligible to enter the district contest held in March each year. The contest is in two parts: a written exam on theory learned in class; second, a practical demonstration of skills on actual machinery. Time is also involved. A business meeting with recreational activities is held every six weeks.

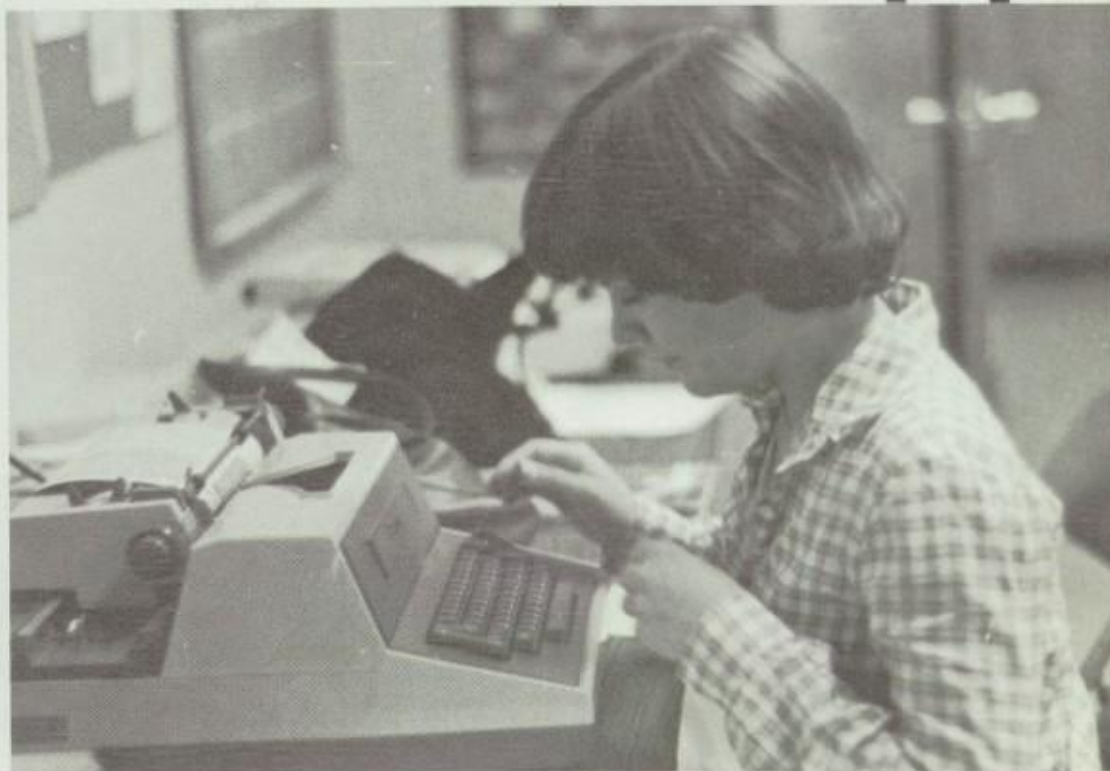

Larry Ingram awaits a needed part to finish his monthly project.

Starting Anew

After the change in sponsors, the Horn Room was relocated in the science building. Some staffers got artistic and painted a four color arrow on the walls of their new domain. The new staffers and photographers attended the Summer Communications Seminar in Lubbock on the Tech Campus where they were taught the finer points of yearbook production.

When the problem of a shortage of staffers arose, a search began for people with previous journalism and photographic experience.

Yearbook advisor, Mrs. Yvonne Gadeke was just that an advisor. She did not force her ideas on the members and was fairly tolerant about late deadlines. However, she was firm and occasionally members found their Saturdays spent at her house working on pages.

The journalism students were subjected to an extra amount of pressure, worry and frustration than that of an ordinary student, however they did learn much about organization, time management and responsibility.

Junior Diane Yount is a hard working member who never missed a deadline.

Ho! Ho! Ho! Adding to the Christmas spirit, along with Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer and Santa Claus, is the annual door decorating contest with individual classrooms competing for prizes.

Lockers aren't the only things that are crowded. Daily, hundreds of kids rush out of class only to squeeze onto hot, bumpy school buses for that long ride home.

Kris Davis likes being 'the girl in the swing' at the senior play cast banquet.

Prom marks the highlight of the senior year and signifies the end is near.

Rebecca Zaike, Ralph Yznaga, and Karl Wood show mixed emotions about graduation.

Rodeo club celebrated the end of the year with a banquet at The Barn Door.

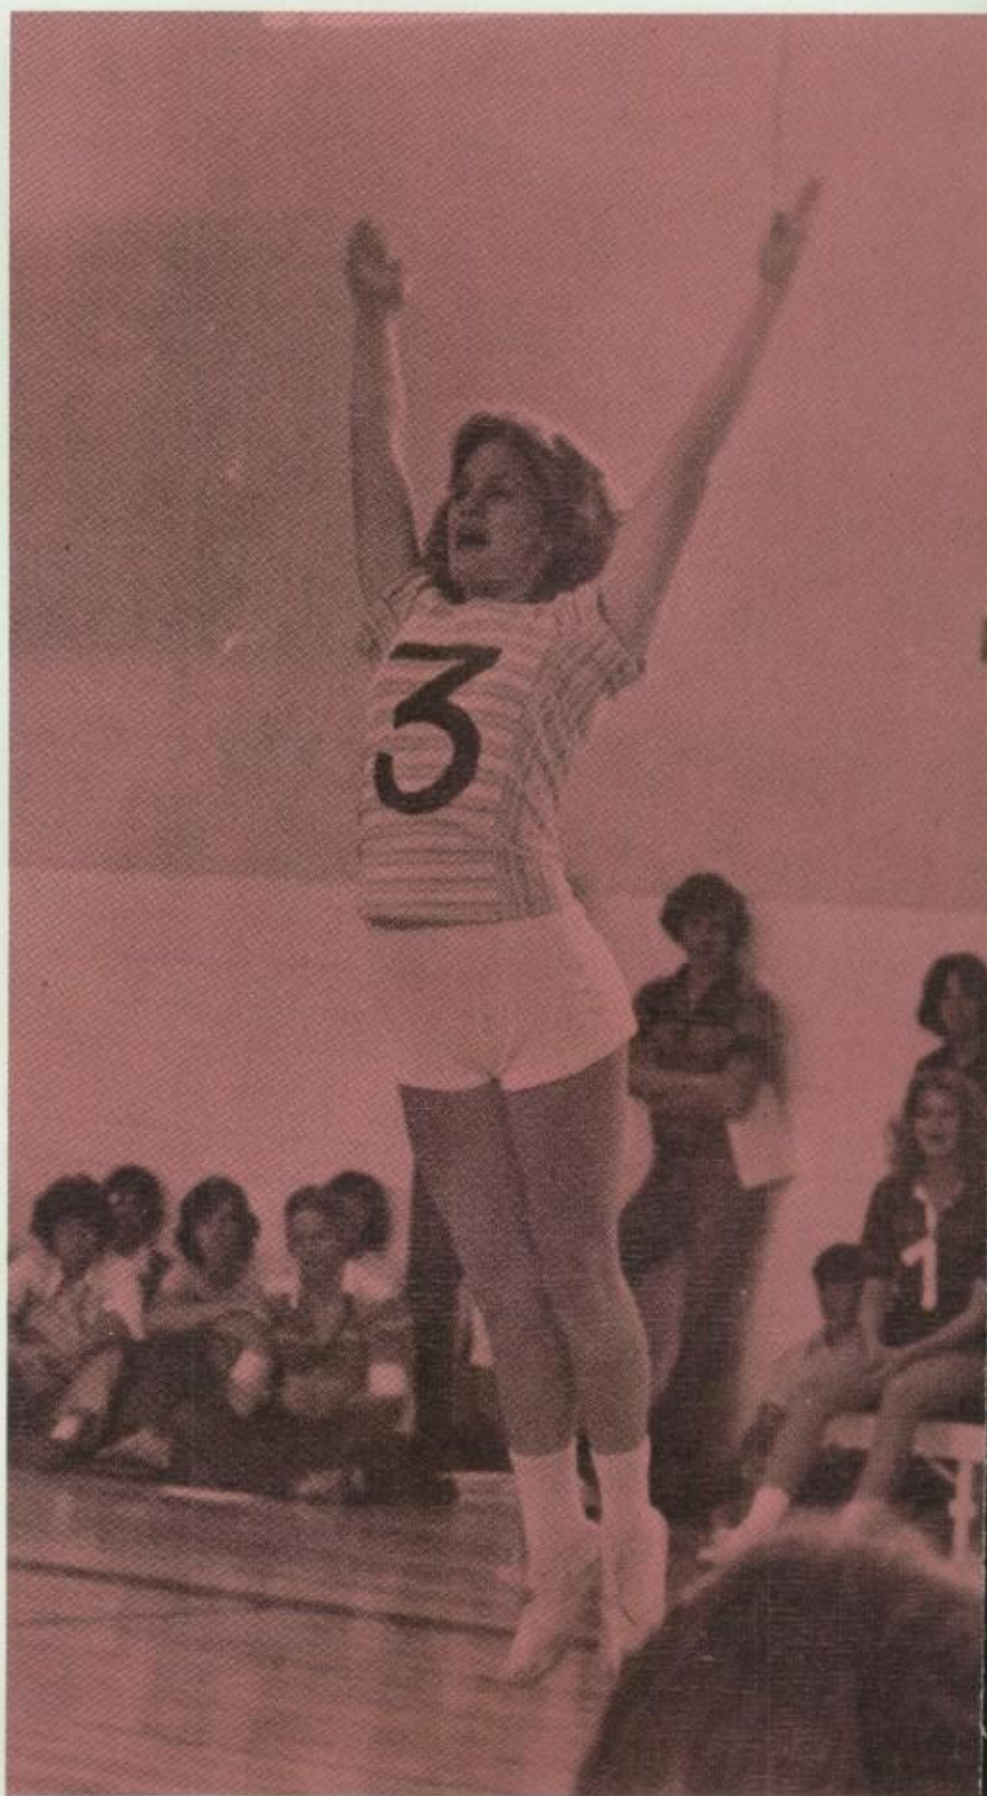

Banquets, Proms, Parties—an Ending for 1978

Two sets of tryouts and elections were held for 1979 Clark and Marshall positions.

Terri Barnett is elated to make the varsity cheerleading squad.

Your the first girl at Marshall I really became good friends with, I'll always remember you when I'm old. I wish all girls were as nice as you. Don't ever forget Mrs. Bason in Chemistry.
That was a super class. Do ever forget Virginia in that class, and how much fun we had teasing her.
Stay sweet and good lookin
Friends Always, Love Todd

Fresh,
Hey Sweetie!
We have alot of fun in cary and remembered and a extra punch and I hope you always
you deserve it, lucky!
and always!
Love ya,
Sweetie
Good luck
Power!

Cee,
You're a great friend + you always have been. Good luck
at Tech + I hope
I'll get to come up there sometime + see
+ see Ann, you
Love ya lots,
Juzamm

Ces, Hey, it's been great, going to school with ya, and we've had a lot of crazy times together.
Good luck in everything!
Love Ya Jesse

Ces,
You are such a nice friend. It's been fun knowing you & just hope
I make it up to you T.T.U. next year! Good luck
in everything you do. Take care!
Love always,
Ellen

Ces—
We have known each other quite a while - and quite well - and have had a lot of fun. But now it's almost over - it's hard to believe. I hope you can find purpose and real joy in your life in the future.
Love —
Randy Jones

Ces,
Well it may be coming up on the end of our high school days but we still have our college days ahead of us and I can't wait. You're a crazy person and a blast to be around. Stay sweet Let's make our last year of high school a blast. OK. Love Susan

Ceslie
You're a really sweet person, and I've enjoyed knowing you. Good luck in the future! And I know you were just kidding all the times in the C.O. office

Ces,
 We've known
 each other along time and if you don't know by now, I've always considered you a very close friend. Lots of love & good luck always. Love
 Lonnie/son

Ces,
 I'm sure glad I have gotten to know you better! You've been a great friend who helps with people with any problems they have. Thanks for being such a great friend & don't forget "Malibu". Good luck in dancing & whatever you do! Love,
 Srs. 79 Vickie

Ces,
 Had to use red so you would remember me. You're such a pretty girl and so sweet.
 This year we have had a really gotten to know each other and I'm so glad. Hope we can always stay in touch. You're also a good historian. Hope
 lots of luck,
 Cheryl K. Anderson
